Legal Views Split on Gold Buying Plan Of President

Justice Officials Doubt
Authority of R. F. C. to Take Metal.

Bonds of Agency Offered Miners
Price of $31.36 Per Ounce Is Fixed as Exchange Value.

By Elliott Thurston.
President Roosevelt launched his new experiment in "managed currency" yesterday amid conflicting legal opinions of authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to sell its debentures and take in exchange newly mined gold on which the Treasury early in the day fixed a price of $31.36 an ounce, 27 cents above the day's opening quotations on world markets and $1.56 above Tuesday's world prices.

Department of Justice authorities who have studied the question doubt whether the R. F. C. has authority to buy gold under this procedure. Stanley Reed, general counsel for the R. F. C., rendered an opinion, on which the President apparently acted, arguing that under section 9 of the R. F. C. act the corporation could offer its debentures for sale and agree to take payment in gold at a fixed rate.

Mr. Reed, however, is not prepared to say that this is unassailable legal ground. Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C. refused to discuss the question for publication. The White House dismissed it yesterday by indicating that it had been ruled upon, and Treasury officials would say nothing whatever on the subject.

Miners May Hold Gold.
If miners hold their gold in anticipation of still higher prices, as might happen, the R. F. C. will not be able to consummate any transactions and the question of legality would remain an academic one.

Meanwhile, the procedure might be changed to conform with the views of those who hold that there are ways in which the gold-buying could be arranged in conformity with law. One way might be to create a Government gold-purchasing agency or bank whose capital stock the R. F. C. would buy.

Mr. Reed, however, is not prepared to say that this is unassailable legal ground. Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C. refused to discuss the question for publication. The White House dismissed it yesterday by indicating that it had been ruled upon, and Treasury officials would say nothing whatever on the subject.

Just how the "artificial" price was arrived at for the American market has not been officially explained, but the purpose was to set the American price sufficiently above

Aid to Soviet Will Be Serious Matter.

Montreal, October 25 (AP)—Recognition of the Soviet government by the United States would be "a serious matter" to Japan, the newly appointed Japanese Ambassador to Sweden, Toshio Shiratori, said here today, en route to his post.

"It is of course, their own business," the ambassador said, "but if the United States advances money to Soviet Russia it will help to consolidate Russia's economic affairs and also help Communist propaganda work in the Far East."

Replying to a suggestion that his views were realistic, Ambassador Shiratori admitted they were.

"I am a diplomat, but I do not mind telling you this because it is the truth, and the sooner the world knows it, the better," he said.

Regular Navy Man, Swanson, Kissed by Fifi

Hollywood, Oct. 25 (AP)—He's a regular Navy man, is Secretary Claude A. Swanson. He proved it today at a luncheon.

Fifi Dorsay, French film actress, skipped down from the stage at a movie studio to kiss a few guests.

Will Rogers came out blushing. Then Fifi stopped beside Secretary Swanson. One hundred guests held their breath. Would she? She did—a generous one. Secretary Swanson emerged, looking as if he liked it.

Sarraut Asked To Form New French Cabinet

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP)—Plump, bald Senator Albert Sarraut, "father of the French colonial empire," sought tonight a way to set up a stable ministry in the face of an unbalanced budget.

Sarraut, one of the most powerful newspaper publishers in France and a noted expert on wines, got the call above the radical party leader and former Premier, Camille Chautemps. Today he consulted his friends and political leaders before definitely accepting the commission to form a cabinet.

He wanted the support of 28 Right Wing Socialists who, split with the veteran leader Leon Blum and voted for the resigned Premier, Edouard Daladier, whose government was overthrown on a project to balance the budget and protect the franc through new taxes and economies.

Refuse to Participate.
Representatives of the Dissident Socialists, however, refused to participate in any cabinet Sarraut might form and demanded that Joseph Paul-Boncour remain as minister of foreign affairs. They announced they would form a new cabinet group if they were excluded from the Socialist party for breaking discipline.

With the help of Right Wing Socialists he sought the assurance of enough votes from the Centre to make a majority. His task admittedly was difficult.

With President Albert Lebrun, M. Sarraut canvassed the situation and tentatively accepted the job, subject to the advice of his friends with whom he examined prospects of making a majority. His task admittedly was difficult.

Official announcement at the palace said "M. Sarraut has accepted this mission." The senator said he "reserved a definite reply," but was regarded as certain to undertake the task.

Attended U. S. Fair.
He made the customary formal call on the president of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies and then went to see M. Daladier and M. Chautemps. Later he called at the marine ministry, which had become the nerve center of France and from which he was expected to summon his advisers and those considered for cabinet portfolios.

Sarraut is a conservative member of the radical wing and is especially popular in the Senate. He is 61. He enlisted in the French army early in the World War, fought in the front lines, and as a lieutenant, won the War Cross for gallantry at Verdun.

Death Row Peril Wins Him $12,000

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 25 (AP)—Compensation of $12,000 for the 22 months he spent in the Ohio Penitentiary "death row" and the five times he faced electrocution before he was freed on a murder charge was voted Joseph Weaver, Negro, today by the Cuyahoga County Commissioners.

The award was made possible through legislation, which authorized compensation up to $15,000.

Los Angeles, Oct. 25 (AP)—A minor earthquake which rocked portions of southern California shortly before midnight Tuesday caused virtually no damage, complete reports today showed.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gets Lost
On Way to Visit Grandson

Ithaca, Pa., Oct. 25 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, on her way to New York and Chicago, stopped here today to visit her 11-month-old grandson, William Donner Roosevelt, and his mother.

Driving from Washington, the President's wife became lost on the suburban roads on the west side of Philadelphia and was nearly two hours late for luncheon.

But this was forgotten when she picked up "Billy," the son or her second son, Elliott, and proudly showed him to visitors. By her side stood Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott. The young mother, who had recently been living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Donner, at Villanova, Pa., has moved into a new home here.

"The reason I was late is, frankly, that I got lost," said the President's wife, standing in the doorway. "I think your roads around here are very difficult."

Accompanied by her secretary, Mrs. Roosevelt's road-finding difficulties apparently led her on other than concrete highways, for when she stepped from her car her low-heeled brown shoes were soled with mud.

It was a happy family reunion. Asked whether she had brought a gift for the baby, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "I certainly did not. I don't believe in giving presents to babies who already have everything they want."

Ship Inquiry Hears G. O. P. Chiefs Named

Hoover, Mellon, Brown
Mentioned in Mail
Contract Quiz.

Senate Committee Told of U. S. Deal for Sale of Vessel.

The names of former President Hoover, former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, and former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown were brought into yesterday's Senate investigation of ocean mail contracts.

Beginning its inquiry into the mail contract of the Colombian Steamship Line, the Senate committee heard the history of the S. S. Haiti—how the Government originally paid $1,000,000 for it and sold it for $100,000 to the Colombian Line, which sold it to the Ocean Dominion Steamship Corporation, commonly known as the Aluminum Line, for $205,000.

In this connection Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, introduced into record a letter written by C. H. C. Fearless, vice president and general manager of the Colombian Lines, to Admiral Cane, of the Shipping Board, in which Fearless stated he had arranged to secure the cooperation of Mellon in his attempt to buy the Haiti to carry bauxite ore.

Pearall told the committee he wrote the letter, but did not remember what the reference was to Mellon meant.

H. H. Bond Testifies.
Inquiry into the Black Diamond Line concluded with the testimony of Henry H. Bond, former Treasury official and law partner of William J. Donovan, who told the committee he had conferred with President Hoover and Postmaster General Brown regarding efforts of his client, the Black Diamond Line, to buy the lines from the Government.

He said he had given Ira Campbell, Washington representative for the Steamship Owners Association and chairman of the President's special committee appointed to investigate the sale, confidential reports on the United States Line, which also was bidding for the vessels.

Bond, questioned by Black about the $100,000 fee paid his firm by the Black Diamond, stated he and Donovan spent almost 2,000 hours on the Black Diamond case.

Dockendorf Recalled.
Black recalled J. E. Dockendorf, president of the Black Diamond, to question him about $33,000 paid James B. Reynolds, former secretary of the Republican national committee and former vice president of the Commercial National Bank, for six years' "advice" to Black Diamond officials when they were operating vessels for the Government.

Dockendorf testified he employed Reynolds for advice and consultation, not for political influence.

"Did you know Reynolds has not reported these fees from you on his income tax return?" asked Black.

"Or that Reynolds said this money constituted gratuity?"

"I know nothing about Reynolds' income tax return," answered the witness.

Black, after the hearing, told newspapermen he had tried to summon Reynolds but learned he has gone to Europe.

Pearall said that when his line purchased the Haiti from the Government for $10,000 the boat was in good repair.

Ship Sold in 3 Years.
He further testified that, although his contract with the Government provided his line operate the vessel for five years, it had been sold about two years later to the Ocean Dominion Line.

"Is that line owned by the Aluminum Co. of America?" asked Black.

"I don't know," answered Pearall.

The purchase price of the vessel, he said, was $35,000 plus $50,000 for good will, plus a minimum of $120,000 commission, totaling $205,000.

"What service did you render for this commission?" asked the Senator.

"We delivered the boat. Nothing else."

It was brought out that the Colombian Line earned in surplus and dividends, for the period 1923-32 a total of $1,500,000, and that after it received its mail contract in March, 1930, its total mail revenue had been $944,000.

Dies in Hospital.

Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, famous Arctic explorer and once commander of an expedition attempting to reach the North Pole, was killed last night, when he stepped in front of an automobile at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street.

He was struck by a car driven by Edmund H. Lloyd, 30, of 3738 Kanawha street, and died of a compound fracture of the skull while being taken to Emergency Hospital.

Lloyd is the son of Bolivar I. Lloyd, assistant to the director of the Bureau of Public Health.

Baldwin left home at 7 o'clock last night, saying he was going out for dinner. He is believed to have been returning home when he was struck by the automobile. Lloyd said he did not see Baldwin until he struck him. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock.

Many Years in Arctic.
Baldwin, who was 71 years old, lived a life of adventure, spending many years in exploration within the Arctic Circle. He was first a companion and then a rival of Robert Edwin Peary, discoverer of the North Pole. Baldwin himself had hoped to be the first to reach the pole. He led one expedition with that in view, but was forced to turn back when his supplies ran low.

Born in Springfield, Mo., July 22, 1862, Baldwin started his career as a prospector.

The four industry divisions which will have charge of code administration follow:

Division 1. Extractive industries (metals, coal, automobiles, shipping and related industries); division administrator, K. M. Simpson; deputies, W. H. Davis, Philip C. Kemp, K. J. Ammerman, L. H. Peabody.

Division 2. Construction and machinery, including lumber and metal products; administrator, Malcolm Muir; deputies, Tom Glasgow, H. O. King, Malcolm Pirnie.

Division 3. Chemicals, leather and other manufactures; administrator, Gen. C. Williams; deputies, Arthur D. Whiting, Dr. E. D. Howard, Dr. Lindsay Rogers, J. B. Dickey.

Division 4. Trades and services, textiles and clothing; administrator, Arthur D. Whiting; deputies, Dr. E. D. Howard, Dr. Lindsay Rogers, J. B. Dickey.

The division will be an administrative branch headed by G. C. Royall, Jr., former chairman of the President's Reemployment Agreement Policy Board; a trade practice branch, headed by K. Johnson; a labor branch, headed by A. J. Altmeppen; and a Blue Eagle branch, headed by the present chief of the Blue Eagle Division, Frank Healy.

The Commerce Department will receive all complaints of violations of the permanent codes; complaints of violations of the President's reemployment agreement will be filed with loyal NRA compliance boards, as at present.

Only on the specific orders of the director will complaints be turned over to the code authorities.

The Trade Association Division, which will have charge of planning and advising the organization of industry for general self-government purposes, will be headed by Gen. R. T. S. Hammond.

Denver, Oct. 25 (AP)—The motor car stopped promptly when the traffic officer opened the air horn. He moved alongside to address the occupants. One passenger was Edwin C. Johnson.

The policeman was jotting down the name before he realized his patient audience was the Governor of Colorado. There was a pause.

"Don't let it happen again," the officer, finally mumbled and sped away.

Johnson Reorganizes to

Administrator Remains
Head of Complaint Department.

Hugh S. Johnson yesterday announced a complete reorganization of the National Recovery Administration. Simultaneously, he made plain the NRA will not hesitate to take initiative in shutting out imports which might jeopardize industries operating with added costs.

Johnson explained the reorganization provides permanent machinery for enforcing codes and hearing charges of violations.

He created four divisions, each headed by a deputy administrator, to be responsible for consideration of pending codes and administration of approved agreements. To lend added effectiveness to enforcement he created a compliance division as well as a national compliance board and a trade association division.

Will Watch for "Dumping."
Realizing strict enforcement of codes will make for higher operating expenses, and to wait upon industry in all cases to make complaints concerning import competition might be hazardous to success, he announced that Oscar B. Ryder, in charge of the new imports division of the NRA, will constantly study import statistics. When Ryder discovers evidence of dumping the administrator will ask the president to make a tariff commission preliminary to erection of higher tariff barriers or declaration of embargoes.

The four industry divisions which will have charge of code administration follow:

Division 1. Extractive industries (metals, coal, automobiles, shipping and related industries); division administrator, K. M. Simpson; deputies, W. H. Davis, Philip C. Kemp, K. J. Ammerman, L. H. Peabody.

Division 2. Construction and machinery, including lumber and metal products; administrator, Malcolm Muir; deputies, Tom Glasgow, H. O. King, Malcolm Pirnie.

Division 3. Chemicals, leather and other manufactures; administrator, Gen. C. Williams; deputies, Arthur D. Whiting, Dr. E. D. Howard, Dr. Lindsay Rogers, J. B. Dickey.

Division 4. Trades and services, textiles and clothing; administrator, Arthur D. Whiting; deputies, Dr. E. D. Howard, Dr. Lindsay Rogers, J. B. Dickey.

The division will be an administrative branch headed by G. C. Royall, Jr., former chairman of the President's Reemployment Agreement Policy Board; a trade practice branch, headed by K. Johnson; a labor branch, headed by A. J. Altmeppen; and a Blue Eagle branch, headed by the present chief of the Blue Eagle Division, Frank Healy.

The Commerce Department will receive all complaints of violations of the permanent codes; complaints of violations of the President's reemployment agreement will be filed with loyal NRA compliance boards, as at present.

Only on the specific orders of the director will complaints be turned over to the code authorities.

The Trade Association Division, which will have charge of planning and advising the organization of industry for general self-government purposes, will be headed by Gen. R. T. S. Hammond.

American astronomers, whose attainment of a first important step in unraveling the mystery of the composition of the sun's corona has been announced, are to be deprived, through international complications, of opportunity to study a new and extraordinarily favorable eclipse, due next February.

This next eclipse, which will exceed all those of the past 15 years in combined advantages for verifying the Einstein theory and studying coronal radiation, can only be observed satisfactorily from two small islands on a still reef in the North Pacific Ocean. These islands, Lomp and Orak, are in the Carolines, under Japanese mandate.

Senate Fight Likely Over Miss Bentley

King Forecasts Battle
Over Selection for Juvenile Judge.

Strong opposition in the Senate to appointment of Miss Fay Bentley as judge of the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia was predicted last night by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District committee. Her appointment was the first of several District appointments awaiting attention of President Roosevelt.

"Miss Bentley is not a Democrat," Senator King said. "She is a good Republican. A great many Washington people objected when it was proposed that she be appointed. There will be plenty of opposition in the Senate."

District Code Quoted.
There is some question of whether Miss Bentley, who has been appointed to succeed Judge Katherine Sellers, can take office until and unless the Senate confirms the appointment. Attorneys said the District code provides she can not take office until after the appointment is confirmed. Senator King said he was not familiar with the exact provision of the code.

It is believed the appointments of two District Commissioners, to succeed Commissioners Luther H. Harris and Ewing Photo.

Conference on Farm Situation.

Appleton, Wis., Oct. 25 (AP)—The Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool today voted to participate in the farm strike. Its adherence will begin at 12:01 a. m. next Tuesday, October 31.

Authorization came from the executive board of the pool, which earlier this year conducted two State-wide strikes. The board adopted a resolution to request its membership to withhold from market all farm produce "without qualification."

The pool is the largest organization of milk producers in the State.

9 Governors Called.
Des Moines, Oct. 25 (AP)—Gov. Herring of Iowa tonight summoned his Midwestern colleagues to conference Monday to prescribe for agriculture's economic ills, while the Farmers National Holiday Association strike continued, with activity apparent in only three States, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Milo Reno, leader of the strike movement, said he would attend the conference and support it. Gov. Herring said the meeting was not called because of the strike, but to consider all problems of agriculture.

The conference originally was suggested by Holiday Association leaders, who wished to confine discussion to an NRA code for agriculture to guarantee cost of production for farm products and to an embargo on farm products by Midwestern States.

Extent of the farm strike tonight was problematical. Market centers reported no deviation from normal.

Motor Magnate Must "Sign Up" to Avoid Exclusion.

$700,000 C. C. C.
Job Also Denied

Johnson Says Business Goes to Blue Eagle Operators.

Because he has refused to sign the NRA code, Henry Ford will be barred from bidding on $10,000,000 worth of equipment for Army motorization and $700,000 worth of trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps, Government officials said yesterday.

The rule is expected to be extended to all departments.

Future purchases will include motor and airplane equipment for the Navy, for which money is available.

The money was allotted to the two branches of the service by the Public Works Administration. The $10,000,000 was allotted to the Army for motorization and $15,000,000 was allotted jointly to the Army and the Navy. This money has not yet been divided.

Bids Are Waived.
Recently the Forest Service asked bids on 14 purchases, to cost about $700,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps. Bids have not yet been received, but none will be accepted from the Ford Motor Co., officials said.

This policy is in line with assertions of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, who has said all Government purchasing would be only from those enrolled in the NRA.

When the dispute between Ford and Johnson was at its height in August, the administrator asserted the manufacturer will sign the code or go his own way—without the aid and protection of the Blue Eagle.

"I think the American people are going to handle the situation," he believed they are going to buy the products of manufacturers who display the Blue Eagle," Johnson said, following a conference at the White House.

An Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Chester, Pa., said that representatives of striking employees in the Ford Company's assembly plant there at a conference with officials of the concern offered a four-point proposal to end the month-old strike.

Goes to Dearborn.
The proposal embodies: Return to work of all strikers "without discrimination," those for whom work is not available are to be hired before new employees are taken on; all strikebreakers to be discharged; and a conference to be held in 10 days to adjust wages and consider any grievances the workers might have.

Leaders of the strikers said their original demands would be the basis of negotiations should the proposal be accepted and a conference arranged. These demands included a $5 minimum daily wage and four-day work week, union recognition, and elimination of fines and the "speedup system."

Arms Parley Urged to Quit Until Dec. 4

Proposal Voted on Today; Germany's Terms Are Expected Soon.

Geneva, Oct. 25 (AP)—Adjournment of the World Disarmament Conference until December 4 was recommended by its steering committee today.

Simultaneously reports, originating in German circles, were current that Chancellor Hitler's government would announce the conditions for Germany's return to the arms discussions and the League of Nations after the November 12 plebiscite, called when her intention to quit both councils was announced.

Arthur Henderson, the British chairman of the conference, said it would be disastrous to adopt a policy which could be interpreted as unwillingness to complete the task of disarmament.

"It would be a serious blow to the League of Nations and would play into the hands of those who say certain powers do not intend to reduce armaments," Henderson explained.

The proposal for a recess, subject to the approval of the conference at a session tomorrow, was made with the understanding that reopening of discussions in December depends on the progress made in the interim, either by private conversations or through a special committee.

American Ambassador Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation, has not decided on his immediate plans, but it was considered likely if adjournment is voted that he will go to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt.

Legal Heads Split On Gold Price Plan

World prices to depress the dollar without too much violence. The gold price calculators had before them opening London and Paris quotations. A few seconds before 10 o'clock, Jones emerged with this announcement:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation will accept subscriptions today for its 90-day debentures, payable in newly mined gold, that is, gold recovered from natural deposits in the United States and any territory subject to its jurisdiction, at the rate of $13.36 per ounce of the gold.

"The procedure for depositing gold in payment of subscriptions will be established today by executive order of the President, and regulations of the Treasury Department."

Plan Without Precedent.

Not only was the fixing of an arbitrary buying price unprecedented, as is the entire experiment in trying to manipulate commodity price levels by varying the price of gold, but this R. F. C. procedure is new. Hitherto the R. F. C. has sold its debentures exclusively to the Treasury.

Now it is offering them to gold miners at a face value in excess of the price to be paid for the gold, the excess to cover costs of discounting the debentures at banks.

Meanwhile, the White House was gratified over the initial inflationary effects flowing from announcement of the renewed purpose to force the dollar down.

As for bewilderment in Wall Street over what to expect next, the President was represented as having no intention of telling. He is working toward a definite goal, it was said, and thought the street would like to have advance information the White House does not propose to disclose its move any more than the Bank of England does. More than 2,000 telegrams, it was added, had reached Mr. Roosevelt, all commending the Sunday night speech and two.

One of these from a New Englander read: "Don't like your speech. Don't understand it." The other, from a Westerner, said: "Think you are all wrong. Silver is the only proper medium of exchange."

Gold Going to Mints.

Government mints reports gold coming in rapidly from mines, but the mints have no authority to pay more for it than the statutory price of $20.67. The government was in the odd position of offering two prices for gold, one $10.69 higher than the other. A third quotation, the figure heretofore announced daily at the Treasury, based on world prices plus shipping and handling costs, was discarded.

Wall Street discount houses lost no time in organizing to offer a market for R. F. C. debentures, which carry interest of 4 1/2 per cent.

Silver advocates also lost no time in arguing that a similar boon should be arranged next for silver. Thus, Senator Pittman, of Nevada, declared the President should come to the aid of the silver market, because raising price of gold lowers price of silver. The silver advocates want 90 cents an ounce paid for it, and comparative increases when, as and if the price of gold is forced upward.

R. F. C. Statute Quoted.

As for R. F. C.'s legal authority to change its debentures into gold, at fixed ratios, Section 9 of the R. F. C. act, under which the authority is claimed, refers only to the authority of the R. F. C. to issue its notes, debentures, bonds, etc., under stipulated conditions. It does not, in this section, specify the purposes for which the debentures, etc., may be issued. But those purposes are specified in the various other sections of the act, and in collateral laws, none of which covers "buying" of gold, or exchange of R. F. C. debentures for gold, or issuance of debentures and acceptance of gold instead of cash to be applied to the various purposes for which the R. F. C. operates.

The official R. F. C. announcement yesterday avoided saying that gold was being bought. Instead, it set forth that the R. F. C. would London Bankers Cautious; Paris Puzzled; Berlin Fears U. S. Play for World Trade Monopoly; Metal Pours In.

London, Oct. 25 (AP)—America's start in the gold-buying business was watched carefully by bullion brokers and bankers today, but it had little effect on the London gold market.

Brokers pointed out that President Roosevelt's experiment deals specifically with newly mined gold recovered from natural deposits in the United States and that so long as only such gold is dealt in there is likely to be little effect felt here.

Gold shares on the stock exchange rose sharply.

On a quiet market the American dollar stood up well and closed at $4.77 to the pound, one cent better than the opening rate.

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP)—Exchange experts in Paris frankly admitted today they were confused as to the effect of the American move.

Famous Explorer Is Killed by Auto

Principal of a small Missouri high school. But before beginning to teach he spent two years hiking and bicycling about Europe.

Varying his school duties with work as an observer for the United States Weather Bureau, he became an expert meteorologist. His knowledge of this subject obtained for him his first opportunity to accompany an Arctic expedition, an opportunity of which he had been dreaming for years.

Goes With Peary.

Peary took him along on his second expedition to Greenland in 1893. The previous year Peary had forced his way across the Greenland ice cap to Independence Bay. Enthusiastic over the smooth surface of the ice, Peary believed he had found a "royal road to the pole."

The expedition which Baldwin accompanied had the pole as its goal. Peary soon found, however, that the going was much rougher than he had expected and the expedition turned back.

The ill-fated Arctic balloon expedition next attracted Baldwin. He was included in the party and set out for Spitzbergen. On July 11, 1897, five days before the Arctic balloon was to take to the air, the winds became so favorable that the expedition was attempted at once. The next day Baldwin reached Spitzbergen, too late to join the expedition, which never returned.

Skeletons Found in 1920.

The Arctic expedition resulted in disaster. In 1893, 33 years later, the skeletons of its participants were found by Norwegian explorers. No satisfactory explanation has been given of how the well-provisioned explorers met death. Baldwin always believed they had been killed by polar bears.

Baldwin had barely escaped a similar death on one of his trips. He and his party were living in a wooden hut which became completely covered with snow. Several times bears passed over it. Baldwin believed the Arctic party had similarly lived in a tent, that a bear had fallen through the top of the tent and killed them.

In 1898 and 1899 Baldwin again ventured into the North, this time a meteorologist and second in command of the Walter Wellman expedition. The party reached the latitude of 81 degrees and 30 seconds, but was equipped inadequately, and the final dash for the pole had to be abandoned. Baldwin, with a small group from the party, set off to the westward and discovered and named Graham Bell Land.

Leads Own Party in 1901.

Two years later, in 1901, came the climax of his career as an explorer. He organized and commanded his own party, the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition. From the south coast to the north coast of Franz Josef Land he established four supply depots. On the northeast coast of Greenland he set up three more, to be used on his return. But in those days Arctic expeditions went into the frozen wastes of the polar regions and became engulfed in silence. There were no radios, no planes. Because of confusion about a supply ship, the men were marooned, facing six months with inadequate fuel. They sent up balloons from which balloons always drifted northward instead of southward.

Exactly 30 years later a Soviet ice breaker found one of these messages in a bottle which had been attached to a balloon. A number of others had been recovered. But none was discovered in time to save the expedition.

Finally, Baldwin returned and attempted unsuccessfully to obtain financial support for another expedition. In 1908, he was frustrated in his ambition of a lifetime when he learned that Perry had reached the pole.

Baldwin came to Washington and became a clerk in the Navy Department. Early in June of this year Maj. Gen. A. W. Greely, himself a noted explorer, appealed to President Roosevelt to save for Baldwin his $133-a-month job. The explorer, however, was dismissed under the age clause of the economy act.

Baldwin never married. Persons with whom he lived at the F street address said they believed he had a sister in Oswego, Kans.

Baldwin was a life member of the Scottish Rite Masons of the Northern Jurisdiction and a member of the Blue Lodge of Oswego, Kans.

"accept subscriptions" to its debentures in newly-mined gold. The R. F. C. contention is that it can instead of cash to be applied to the various purposes for which the R. F. C. operates.

The official R. F. C. announcement yesterday avoided saying that gold was being bought. Instead, it set forth that the R. F. C. would real intent and effect of American purchases of gold.

The fixing of the price at the same level as the one at which the dollar was being quoted in foreign markets caught some speculators short.

Their rush to cover themselves boosted the dollar temporarily, but later trading took it down to 16.15 francs (5.89 cents to the franc).

Speculators received a shock with the announcement that the United States Government was buying gold at about $31 a fine ounce because they had expected a price of about $35.

Instead, the American gold price, in terms of dollar exchange, equaled the 16.81 francs at which the dollar was quoted in trading this morning. The result was that at one time the dollar brought as much as 17.16 francs, although late in the afternoon the quotation slipped to 17.05 (5.82 and 5.93 cents to the franc, respectively). The closing rate yesterday was 17.83 francs (5.67 cents).

Berlin Suspicious Of Market Grab.

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP)—Financial circles in Berlin regarded the American gold policy today as another attempt by America to dominate world markets.

They declared a further depreciation of the dollar would follow an increase of gold prices in the United States, with a subsequent aggravation of the struggle for world markets, in which Germany would be the loser.

Official circles considered how they could meet American dumping, while exporters believed that British sterling must follow the dollar, because Great Britain would try its best to keep a hold on international markets.

More Money, Pleads Governor Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 25 (AP)—Hope that President Roosevelt's gold-purchase plan would mean "more basic money" was expressed by Gov. Charles W. Bryan today as he echoed the more-money plea voiced by his brother, William Jennings Bryan, 37 years ago.

The governor said the silver issue declined after his brother failed to win the Presidency on his free-coinage campaign of 1896, but the only reason was because of "the discovery of a great deal of additional gold and improved processes of refining."

"Gold," Gov. Bryan said, "thus served the need for additional money and for a number of years the silver question was not acute. Conditions are now arising which it seems to me, must be met by the issue of our present large gold supply or on silver in order to increase the currency; in other words, inflation."

Bryan said such money was necessary to "replace money burned in 1921 and 1922 by the Federal Reserve Bank under the Harding administration to the extent of $5,000,000."

$250,000 in Gold Reaches Mint.

Denver, Oct. 25 (AP)—Miners of the Rocky Mountain region sent gold estimated to be worth about $250,000 to the Denver mint today. Mark A. Skinner, superintendent, said the shipment represented an overnight profit of about $12,000 to the miners, based on the Government's purchase price of $31.36 an ounce for newly-mined gold.

Pecora Says Bank Unloaded Bonds

the face of a $7,440,000 Cuban treasury deficit the previous year, and no mention of the deficit was made in advertisements.

Morgan said he thought the public would have bought the bonds anyway, but declared there was disagreement as to whether there actually was a deficit. He read from a statement of the Cuban Consul General reporting a small surplus that year.

Pecora brought out that in 1929 the Cuban government "borrowed" as high as $9,000,000 from Treasury funds set aside to back up public works loans, and used them for other budgetary purposes.

He read from a letter addressed to Morgan from the Havana branch in May, 1931, reporting the Cuban government was not segregating public works money and "from time to time has been compelled to use all funds in hand to meet budgetary and other pressing payments."

The letter told how news of a $1,000,000 gold shipment from the Cuban government to the Chase Bank was carefully guarded.

"In order to keep knowledge from the public of such a large shipment of Cuban gold, we are doing all possible to handle the shipment as secretly as possible and the government has established a customs censorship," the letter read.

Couzens Interrupts.

When Morgan disputed Pecora's charge that Cuba violated her contract agreement with Chase when public works funds were not segregated, Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, interrupted.

"It seems a good thing to me that Chase has gone out of the security business."

Discussing the $40,000,000 Cuban bond flotation, which enabled Chase to pay off $30,000,000 of its own serial certificate holdings, Pecora charged the bank with "unloading" this amount on the public.

"The bank was reimbursed by the sale of the bonds, so it was the public which ultimately paid the freight," said Pecora.

Morgan testified Chase got an option on another $40,000,000 Cuban bond issue, by advancing an additional $20,000,000 credit to Cuba, at the time the original $40,000,000 bond issue was floated in 1930.

Holdups Spur Indiana Hunt For Convicts

U. S. and State Officers Redouble Efforts; Two Banks Robbed.

Indianapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—Federal and State law enforcement agencies sought today to coordinate their forces in an attempt to capture a band of desperate convicts which has been terrorizing Indiana and Ohio for nearly a month.

While officers were conferring, banks were robbed at Fillmore, Ind., and Modoc, Ind. The third and fourth bank holdups this week. Total loot for three days is close to $80,000.

Authorities suspect convicts who fought their way out of the Michigan City Prison, September 26 and were joined a few days later by John Dillinger, alleged bank robber, delivered from the Lima, Ohio, jail by three men who shot and killed Sheriff Jess Sarber.

Officers are involving that Dillinger and Harry Pierpont, identified as the trigger man in the slaying of Sarber, participated in Monday's $75,000 robbery of the Central National Bank & Trust Co., at Greencastle.

The Western State Bank at South Bend was robbed of $1,500 in cash and $1,000 in Liberty bonds yesterday.

Capt. Matt Leach of the State police conferred today with Bliss Morton, United States Department of Justice agent, on coordinating Federal and State forces.

V. M. Armstrong, State commander of the American Legion, called on 30,000 Hoosier Legionnaires to "assist our constituted authorities in waging a relentless war against violence." He asked the 802 legion posts to assist law enforcement in the search for and guarding of their own communities against crime.

Gov. Paul V. McNutt acted upon a report of the prison trustees who investigated the September 28 break and dismissed H. D. Claudy, deputy warden, accused of "gross negligence, and Albert Evans, second assistant deputy, the officer forced to march across the prison yard with the escaping prisoners.

Thomas Leahy, Chicago radio crooner, pleaded guilty at Plymouth, Ind., to participation in the $75,000 robbery of the Central National Bank & Trust Co. at Greencastle, Ind. He was sentenced to serve ten years in prison.

Capt. Leach compiled the criminal records of the supposed members of the gang.

Of the men who participated in the prison break one was recaptured at Hammond and another was killed by a Brown County citizen.

2 Die, Many Hurt In Madrid Riots

Guards and Strikers Clash Throughout City.

Madrid, Oct. 25 (AP)—A strike of syndicalists and construction workers assumed a serious aspect tonight as an outbreak in suburban Tetuan resulted in death of two workers and wounding of several others.

The strikers fired upon drivers of wagons loaded with construction material. The latter replied with a barrage of bricks in which one person was killed and several hurt.

Syndicalists shot another worker. Police guards were doubled. 50 suspects were arrested. Meanwhile, classes were suspended in Madrid University until Monday as demonstrations by law students continued.

but are continuing in their posts until their successors can be named. Miss Bentley is at present director of school attendance and work permits for the Board of Education.

Long in Child Work.

Since her graduation from the University of Chicago, in 1918, Miss Bentley has been constantly associated with school and child welfare organizations.

Her appointment has been supported by prominent social and child labor welfare workers, not only in Washington, but in all parts of the country. Officials in the Children's Bureau, with which Miss Bentley was affiliated for several years, feel that her appointment is especially fitting because of her extensive experience, both in schools and in child welfare work.

As a member of the delinquency committee of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, Miss Bentley did outstanding work in her study of behavior and delinquency problems, presenting a comprehensive program to the conference.

Won Degree From G. W. U.

The new judge, a native of Bloomington, Ill., in addition to her degree of Ph.D. from the University of Chicago, received her LL.B. from George Washington University in 1930.

She first came to Washington in 1920 in the child labor tax division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. In 1922 she joined the Children's Bureau, where she stayed until 1925. Shortly after she went with the Board of Education where, in addition to her work in attendance, she has been active in indorsement of the child labor law in the District.

Miss Bentley believes truancy is a very important factor in dealing with child delinquency and substance with crime. Her study of truancy throughout the United States has convinced her that proper handling of truancy is one of the most important factors in her new job.

Bail Raised On Lindbergh Case Suspect

John Gorch and Woman Companion Remanded to Boston Jail.

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP)—Under investigation as a suspect in the kidnapping and murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., in New Jersey, John Gorch, wrestler and former convict, was taken into Municipal Court today in order that his bail could be increased from $10,500 to $50,000.

Boston police accompanied by New York and New Jersey officers, asked bond be fixed at $75,000, but Municipal Judge Charles Carr decided the lower figure would suffice.

At the same time the court increased bail of Miss Evelyn Klimeska, 23, arrested with Gorch on statutory charges Sunday, from $500 to $10,500.

The two were arraigned on fugitive warrants in connection with alleged swindles involving $3,200 in Jersey City and Newark. Both entered pleas of not guilty and were remanded to jail.

New Jersey and New York detectives, sent here to investigate Gorch as a Lindbergh case suspect, were checking articles confiscated yesterday from Gorch's apartment.

Gorch reiterated today that he has no direct knowledge of the Lindbergh kidnapping.

"Second-Story Man."

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—Specimens of the handwriting of John Gorch, under arrest as a suspect in the Lindbergh kidnapping case at Boston, have been compared with the Lindbergh ransom notes and indicate to experts that Gorch could have written the notes, the New York World-Telegram said it had learned from a Federal agent today.

The same informant said Gorch was known to police as a "second-story man" and that he is 30 or 40 pounds lighter in weight now than at the time of the kidnapping, indicating he has changed in general appearance.

New York police, seeking a clew in the case, opened a safe deposit box held by Gorch in a local bank and found nothing but empty envelopes and blank deposit slips.

Meanwhile, police officers connected with the Lindbergh investigation announced they believe Gorch knows nothing of the kidnapping.

Era of Change Seen in Home Building Trade

New Improvements Come So Fast That Many Houses Are Quickly Obsolete.

This is the eighth of a series on revival of home construction, with particular reference to Washington.

By B. H. Graver, Builder.

During recent years there has been a progressive improvement in the architecture, structural details and equipment of the home. This improvement has been so extensive and so rapid that houses become obsolete faster than ever before. As it continues, the home may be viewed in the future as a convenience of frequent replacement, like the automobile, instead of a lifetime abode as in the past. Perhaps there will be trade-ins for new models and a used-home market. Something of this sort already goes on in real estate operations.

To begin with architecture, the layout of the modern home receives more consideration from the standpoint of convenience as well as appearance. All services are conducted with decreasing effort on account of the proper relative location of rooms. Cleaning is easier and can be more thorough. More attention is paid to light and ventilation. The basement is no longer a gloomy storehouse of fuel and junk. It is designed for playrooms and recreational facilities as well as for storage and the operation of various household services.

The use of the automobile has had its influence on the architecture of the modern home, for consideration must be given to the garage and to passage between the car and the house in stormy weather.

Plastering Is Better.

With respect to structural detail, there have been improvements which are common knowledge among members of the building trade, but not generally understood by the average home owner or tenant. There is a more general use of weather stripping, screening, and caulking. The use of hardwood flooring has been extended to upper stories. Floors are now usually laid double, which eliminates squeaks and the collection of dust.

Plastering is of a much better quality, because of the use of a better grade of sand. Better insulation is general, and this reduces storm damage, resulting from leaks and cuts down heating costs. Fire risk is reduced in many ways, including more general use of fire-proof or slow-burning materials and the sealing of interior wall spaces to prevent the travel of flames and smoke within the walls. Electric wiring is better and more artistic. There is an increasing use of solid brass fittings and glass knobs. Brass and copper for pipes and tanks eliminates the accumulation of rust in the water, adds to the life of the plumbing, and has salvage value. The chromium plated fixtures now coming into general use are easier to clean and improve the appearance of kitchen and bathroom.

New Era in Kitchen.

The modern kitchen, with its color, ample cabinet spaces, and conveniences, would hardly be recognized by a housewife stepping from a kitchen of but a few years ago. And nowhere has there been so great a change as in the bathroom. This, too, now carries the modern dominant note of cheerful color. There is an increasing use of showers.

All bathroom fixtures are better in quality and appearance, and even the small modern home has at least two bathrooms.

The various mechanical appliances now available to even the modest purse make the small home a much easier, more comfortable and more healthful place to live. We have the oil burner and many types of mechanical stokers for other kinds of fuel. The electric or gas operated kitchen refrigerator is coming into universal use. It makes possible larger and better preservation of food-stuffs, the provision of frozen desserts and a supply of ice for cooling drinks.

Sees Good Values Today.

Because of all these improvements and because of recent declines in material and labor costs and increased efficiency in construction, it is possible today to build a better home than ever at the lowest costs in years. I estimate that a house which would have cost $12,000 six years ago and $10,000 three years ago would cost only $8,000 today. A house which would have cost $17,500 eight years ago would involve the expenditure of only $12,000 at the present time.

The average $7,000 home of today would have been the envy of men of substantial means not so many years ago. The home builder of today not only has the benefit of low costs, but he gets a better job and more conveniences than were ever before available in the history of the building business.

I have spoken principally of homes of the better sort because I have been identified with their construction and because I feel that one of the first manifestations of the next period of building activity will be a reviving demand for homes of this type. This should be the case in Washington particularly, for the city is increasingly the attractive residential center for people of taste and stable, adequate incomes.

The provision of mass or inexpensive housing or the remodeling of existing obsolete houses for people in the very low income brackets is another story.

Ritchie Spurns Further Delay In Hanging Lee

Refuses Stay as Counsel and Attorney General Speed to Court.

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—While attorneys were on their way to Richmond, Va., to go before Judge Morris A. Soper, of the United States Circuit Court, to argue the case of Euel Lee, Negro, scheduled to hang Friday morning, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie tonight declined to postpone the execution.

"To do so would be a travesty on justice," declared the governor. "Lee has been convicted twice and I will not issue a stay of execution."

Charles McHenry Howard, who on appointment by the Federal District Court here joined the Lee defense two days ago, sought from Judge Soper a writ of probable cause which would permit the Lee defense to appeal from the District Court's refusal to take the Lee case out of the hands of the State.

Howard was Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., who will argue against the motion. They have an engagement with Judge Soper tonight.

After Gov. Ritchie had set the date for the Lee execution, David Levinson, of Philadelphia, and Bernard Ades went before the District Court here with a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in an effort to take the case away from the State.

Slayer's Plea Fails.

Richmond, Oct. 25 (AP).—Judges Morris A. Soper and John J. Parker, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals tonight refused to grant a certificate of probable cause for an appeal in the case of Euel Lee, Maryland Negro, sentenced to die Friday for the murder of a white man.

Maryland authorities were unsuccessful in their attempt to return him.

Kelly was accused of wounding Joseph Dombkowski, 24, his brother, John, 26, and John Brennan.

D. C. Schools Plan Exposition of NRA

The NRA will make a belated bow to Washington school children in National Education Week early in November, school officials indicated yesterday.

Committees are scheduled to be appointed today to map a campaign in junior and senior high schools. Talks will be made to the students on objectives of the NRA, and literature will be distributed, according to a pamphlet issued for school use in Pittsburgh. NRA headquarters probably will be asked to obtain similar pamphlets for use here. No courses on the NRA will be taught in local public schools, Kramer said.

Scientists Likely To Miss Eclipse

Islands—astronomers by themselves are considered harmless by the Japanese—the greatest opportunity to verify the Einstein theory since the eclipse of May 28-29, 1919, when that theory was still as nebulous as some of the higher celestial nebulae, will be lost to American astronomy. The eclipse of February 13, 1934, will be under Japanese control.

The importance of this forthcoming juxtaposition of the sun and moon to science was explained yesterday by Prof. James Robertson, director of the United States Naval Observatory here. Prof. Robertson, whose ability to predict the paths of total eclipses within a few feet through calculations made years in advance has won him undisputed first place among astronomers of position throughout the world, said the chief advantage in observing next February's eclipse "lies in the fact that the sun will appear eclipsed in the center of a group of stars, about 100 of which, ranging from the fifth to the ninth magnitude, are within 2½ degrees of the sun's center."

Orakuk Is Nearest.

"While the eclipse will be visible as a partial eclipse in general over eastern Asia, Australia and the extreme western portion of North America, these regions all remain so near the edge of the penumbra that the darkening effect will be scarcely noticeable. The only points of vantage for viewing this eclipse are two small island groups near the center of the Pacific Ocean."

"Of these groups, Losap and Orakuk, the former lies nearer the central line of totality and hence is the more desirable location for observation stations. At a point on Laol, one of the Losap group, longitude 132 degrees 48 minutes east and 6 degrees 54 minutes north, the duration of totality will be 2 minutes and 5 seconds. The weather is usually clear in these regions during February."

While pointing out that the time was short, Prof. Robertson expressed the fervent hope that an expedition of American or European observers might make the trip to the Carolines.

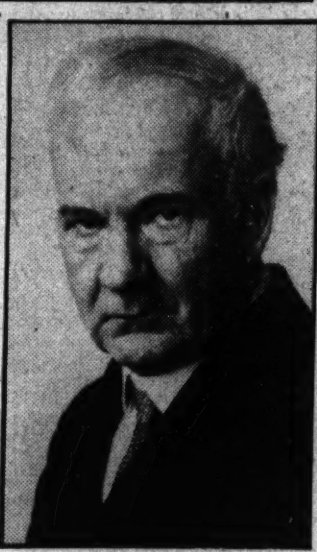

The kindly, white-haired director, as one of the world's master mathematicians, has a particular interest in eclipses.

"The greatest of all tests of the accuracy of our calculations is the eclipse," he said.

Always Swing Into Line.

After Prof. Robertson has foretold to the split second the position of the sun, moon and earth, with due consideration for the motion of the equinoxes and the pull of Jupiter and Mars, he sits unconcerned at his desk and waits for the heavenly bodies to swing into line. Thus far they always have.

There will be a larger and more impressive eclipse over the Pacific in

PROF. JAMES ROBERTSON.

1937, Prof. Robertson confided, but unfortunately there are no islands from which it can be observed. There was once such an island, known as "Sarah Ann," which appeared on earlier Rand-McNally maps, but it disappeared many years ago. This is rather a pity, for the 1937 eclipse will last more than 7 minutes in some locations.

This longer eclipse will not be of as great value as the brief one in February for verifying the Einstein theory, for the sun, at the period of totality, will not be in the midst of any such impressive group of stars.

The United States Naval Observatory is concerned with astronomy of position, rather than spectroscopic astronomy, its superintendent, Capt. J. F. Hellweg, pointed out yesterday, explaining why its personnel is not engaged in speculations regarding the composition of the sun's corona such as the theory announced Tuesday by Prof. Harlow Shapley of Harvard.

Used All Over World.

The Washington observatory prepares and publishes the American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac which is used by astronomers the world over as a basis for their calculations. It provides the data on celestial mechanics whereby navigation is made possible, and its primary purpose is to furnish the United States Navy with accurate information on where the sun, moon, planets, asteroids and fixed stars will be located at any given time. Day in, day out, its observers are constantly checking the positions of the celestial bodies, providing the "bench mark" from which all other astronomical calculations start.

Within a few months, the Naval Observatory will become the finest in the world through the addition of a new telescope on which Prof. G. W. Ritchey is at work. The new telescope, the secrets of which are being guarded, will have a 40-inch lens of pyrex glass, which is harder than flint, and which will be ground on what is known as the Ritchey-Chretien curve. This curve, named for Prof. Ritchey and his French colleague, Dr. Henri Chretien, provides as clear an image on its edge as near the center, something never acquired on the old type of glass. The lens will be nearly twice as large as any of pyrex glass in existence.

It is expected the new telescope will be placed in use early in 1934.

Pajama-Clad President Sits In Bed and Jests With Press

Cold Fails to Keep Him From Meeting Barrage of Questioners.

The "new deal" chalked up another victory for informality yesterday as President Roosevelt, propped up in a comfortable, old-fashioned mahogany bed at the White House, received a tip-toeing delegation of the Nation's press.

Mr. Roosevelt, suffering from an irritating nose cold, looked like anything but a sick man as the correspondents were ushered into his high-ceilinged bedroom on the second floor of the mansion.

With several big pillows at his back, he was smiling broadly as the little group filed in. With a wave of a hand that held a half-smoked cigarette, he motioned them to range about the bedside and begin their questioning.

Questions Fly.

The queries came, thick and fast, Mr. Roosevelt replying to them all. Interrogations there were on gold, farm relief, farm strike, employment and unemployment, Cuba, liquor, captive mines and a dozen of others of lesser importance.

The Chief Executive, however, who revealed he had just undergone a lamp treatment to clear up his cold, finally turned the semi-weekly press conference away from the serious things of life to relate several amusing incidents of the last few days involving himself.

Explaining that more than 2,000 laudatory telegrams had been received on his speech announcing his new monetary policy, he said there were two that came in that were not in praise of his latest step.

All Wrong, Say Two.

The first was wired by a New England citizen, who wrote: "I did not like your speech. I could not understand it."

The second came from the West and read:

"I think you are all wrong; silver is the only proper medium of exchange."

In the sheaf of messages the President also discovered, it was learned, two or three from farmers who applied immediately in response to his request that those threatened with foreclosure get in touch with the White House without delay.

Mr. Roosevelt, who seemed to enjoy the role of "late sleeper," announced he planned to be on the job at the executive offices today.

Representatives of steel companies owning "captive" mines will come to Washington soon to report progress in their negotiations with striking miners. This information was contained in a letter received by President Roosevelt last night from Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation.

The letter followed insistence from the White House that steel plant owners act soon to settle their differences with the workers. It was made clear at the White House that immediate action is forthcoming the President himself will act.

Assurance was given the President by Taylor that negotiations with the miners had not broken down following an agreement by the operators to abide by the "check-off" provision of the coal code. This provision makes it obligatory for operators to deduct union dues from miners' pay and turn the dues over to the union.

A group of miners, headed by Martin Brennan, of Uniontown, Pa., came to Washington yesterday and talked with John L. Lewis, president of the union, who said they "wanted to know what was going on."

Rotary Club Discusses Employer, Employee

Relationship between employers and employees was discussed yesterday by the Washington Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel. A. F. Z. Horn stressed need for careful selection of employees and a check-up on their performance to insure full recognition of efficient service.

Discussion revealed many Washington employers are performing services of marked value to their employees. These include medical, nursing and dental departments and recreational rooms.

It is expected the new telescope will be placed in use early in 1934.

Within a few months, the Naval Observatory will become the finest in the world through the addition of a new telescope on which Prof. G. W. Ritchey is at work. The new telescope, the secrets of which are being guarded, will have a 40-inch lens of pyrex glass, which is harder than flint, and which will be ground on what is known as the Ritchey-Chretien curve. This curve, named for Prof. Ritchey and his French colleague, Dr. Henri Chretien, provides as clear an image on its edge as near the center, something never acquired on the old type of glass. The lens will be nearly twice as large as any of pyrex glass in existence.

Riggs Starts Defense in Suit For Damages

Bank Fights $300,000 Claim Loses Through Harry V. Haynes.

Attorneys for the Riggs National Bank and 17 former members of the board of directors and former officers of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Georgetown, yesterday began presentation of their defense in the $300,000 suit brought against them by Mrs. Louise T. Chambers. Frank J. Hogan and Edmund Jones, defense counsel, presented former officers and directors to show the acts of Harry V. Haynes were never known to the bank, which was absorbed by Riggs after its affairs became entangled.

They contended that Riggs, as successor to the Farmers & Mechanics, had done all it could equitably do to aid Mrs. Chambers and had secured from her, after consultation with her attorneys, two separate releases, which they claimed relieved the bank from further liability.

Mrs. Chambers is suing on the grounds that the bank was responsible for the mismanagement of her funds by Haynes when he was president of the Farmers institution. She claimed she had lost $108,000 in stock besides money losses.

Testimony is expected to be concluded tomorrow.

ESTABLISHMENT of that highly technical figure, the index number of the change in cost of living for Government clerks since 1928, is the problem now confronting those in charge of the cost of living survey conducted by the Department of Labor.

To obtain this number, data must be obtained on the cost of various articles in 1928 and their cost now, then through a series of mathematical legwork at which statisticians alone are especially adept, the said figure is established. After that is done, the rest of the work is comparatively easy, so 'tis said. Meanwhile information is still being obtained and compiled on living costs in individual cases.

At present investigators are interviewing unmarried clerks at their desks. Heads of families were interviewed at their homes. In these interviews selected clerks chosen as representative of certain classes, are seen.

Officials in charge of the survey are highly pleased with the cooperation accorded by the employees. About 85,000 questionnaires were sent out and approximately 55,000 answers received. Many of the 10,000 not answered undoubtedly went to persons no longer in the service.

A second questionnaire now being prepared will be distributed within a few days to several thousand employees selected as representative cases, from the answers received to the first questionnaire.

The survey is being made under the supervision of Dr. Isaac Lubin, director of the Labor Statistics Bureau.

Mrs. Jennie B. Burnham, Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, died Tuesday at her home in Washington after more than 30 years of service. The Mailmen rolling against the Division of Investigation took first place in the Federal Bowling League. Their victory was largely due to Heck Barrett's 361 set, featuring a 138 game.

Commerce, led by Gene Hartnett, the league's leading bowler, with a set of 370, defeated the Government Printing Office 2 out of 3, while the Navy Yard and Patent Office won 2 from Bureau of Prisons and Veterans' Administration, respectively.

In the match between National Capital Parks and Internal Revenue, the veteran bowler, George Miller, led his team to a clean sweep over the Tax Collectors. His set of 373, which included a 147 game, was climaxed by a triple-header strike in the last three boxes.

Dickstein Asks Probe of Nazi Action in U. S.

House Subcommittee Will Start Propaganda Query Nov. 14.

Alleged Nazi propaganda activities in the United States will receive preliminary Congressional examination November 14 when a subcommittee of the House Immigration Committee is expected to open hearings, the committee's chairman, Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, announced yesterday.

"We have enough material on hand," Dickstein said in a statement, "to open the eyes of the American public to Nazi propaganda in this country. If we did in Germany one twentieth of what they are doing here, we'd be shot," the statement added.

Dickstein also said he had asked the Department of Labor to look into the standing of one Heinz Spanknobel, reputed to be a Nazi propagandist in New York City. Deportation was to be the aim of the investigation.

On the basis of the disclosures he plans to make, Dickstein intends to ask Congress for funds and subpoena powers for a later and wider investigation.

At the German Embassy it was explained that the activities Dickstein has in mind are those of the so-called League of New Germans, an entirely unofficial organization under the leadership of Heinz Spanknobel with headquarters in New York City.

This league, the embassy pointed out, has no connection with German diplomatic or consular offices in this country nor is it officially connected with the Reich government.

It is said to be a voluntary organization, founded by German-Americans and Germans resident in America.

business, but leaders of the non-buying nonstriking campaign said it is too early for an accurate check. The strike was called Saturday.

There was some picketing in central Wisconsin and western Iowa, and several creameries and cheese factories were closed. One creamery at Bryceland, Minn., closed at noon in sympathy with the strikers.

Iowa Pickets Withdraw.
Pickets withdrew today near Omaha and Council Bluffs markets, but said they would barricade highways again tonight.

Despite the lack of visible efforts to enforce the strike, holiday leaders said the movement was gaining momentum.

Reno said he would go to Chicago tonight in his efforts to spread the strike. He planned a broadcast over an N. B. C. hookup tomorrow from 12:30 to 1 p. m. (C. S. T.).

Reno's office reported encouragement from Senator Nye, of North Dakota, who wrote "you have started real thinking and real concern in Washington." C. E. Covert, of Detroit, chairman of the Mechanics Educational Society of America, said "18,000 skilled workers are behind you."

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Support of 148 farmers' elevators in Illinois today was pledged to the new Farmers' National Cooperative Elevator Association by G. C. Johnston, Bloomington, Ill., president of the Illinois Grain Corporation.

Murray Uses Guard to Seize Soldiers' Home

Gets Keys to Buildings He Closed, Despite Court Order.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 25 (AP).—The National Guard won another skirmish for Gov. William H. Murray today, seizing the Union Soldiers' Home here in defiance of a State district court order.

The governor, who forced the closing of the home several months ago by vetoing a $28,000 appropriation for its operation, called on Adj. Gen. Charles F. Barrett to enforce an executive order directing Mrs. G. B. McGinley, former matron of the institution, to turn over the keys to Hospital Supt. P. B. Bostic.

Mrs. McGinley, following instructions of the home trustees not to surrender the keys "without a fight," refused Bostic's first request for them. She yielded when he returned with the governor's order and Gen. Barrett.

The trustees last summer won a district court injunction prohibiting interference with their control of the home. Attorneys for the trustees conferred tonight on how to combat Gov. Murray's action.

"Our position has not changed one bit," said R. B. Wedding, secretary of the trustees. "We still maintain that the home is under our direction as trustees, and not under the governor's."

Communists Fail In Mob Protest

Permit to Appear Before White House Denied.

Permit for a Communist demonstration in front of the White House on behalf of Euel Lee and against the Eastern Shore lynchings was refused yesterday by Chief of Police Brown.

Because the proposed demonstration, which was to have been held this morning, would interfere with traffic, Maj. Brown refused to allow it. The permit was requested by Charles Spencer, who said the marchers would appear with placards and banners and "make demands."

According to a Communist manifesto, the demonstration was to reinforce the visit of a delegation to the White House. This delegation planned to ask the President to free Euel Lee, convicted several times of a triple murder on the Eastern Shore, and to order death for the mob which lynched another Eastern Shore colored man last week.

ARE YOU HONEST WITH YOURSELF ABOUT LIQUOR?

Every reputable liquor dealer recognizes drunkenness as the greatest enemy of his business.

Any doctor will tell you that the best way to fight intemperance is with food. With a full stomach, there will be no craving to get drunk.

Imitate the ancient Egyptians, who put alcohol into their food in the form of delicious aromatic seasonings. Through food, they controlled the vice of drunkenness.

Angostura is the modern way to fight alcoholism. A teaspoonful on the grapefruit, in the tomato juice, the fruit cocktail; a half a tablespoonful in the soup, the fish sauces, the gravies and on the salad. A few dashes on ice cream, custards, pies, stewed and preserved fruits.

This delicious appetizer not only creates the desire for food but it stimulates the stomach secretions, so necessary to digestion, which are rendered inactive by over-indulgence in alcohol. This is a delightful way to stop the craving. Do not resort to powerful drugs.

McKee Sees Old Guard Plot On Roosevelt

Blames Mills, Stimson for Dragging President's Name Into Race.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Joseph V. McKee today held a group of Old Guard Republicans responsible for injection of the name of President Roosevelt into New York's mayoral campaign.

While Fiorello LaGuardia, fusion nominee, called McKee's statement that "a vote for McKee is a vote for Roosevelt" a "confession of weakness," the Independent Democrat said:

"Mr. Roosevelt was brought into the campaign when Republican Leaders Mills, Stimson and others, made support of LaGuardia a means for attempting to break down President Roosevelt's leadership."

Sees Old Guard Smiling.

"You can be sure of one thing," he smiled; "if I am defeated, you'll see interviews from Old Guard Republicans saying 'Ha, ha, Roosevelt was licked in his first test.'"

Asserting McKee's statement was a confession he "can not win on his own merits," LaGuardia said National affairs had no place in a campaign designed to end Tammany Hall's grip on the city's government.

Calls McKee "Presumptuous."

"A vote for Mr. McKee is simply a vote for political machine government," said LaGuardia. "In view of President Roosevelt's repeated statements that he is taking no part in city campaigns, Mr. McKee's presumptuous statement must be embarrassing to the President."

It was said again at the White House that Mr. Roosevelt was not taking any notice of any local election.

Alan Fox, Republican leader, said several Republican district leaders in Manhattan were "quietly working for McKee."

LaGuardia Called "Communist."

LaGuardia, called by McKee "a Communist at heart," said:

"I am an independent Progressive, owing no allegiance to any party, responsible only to the people I have served 25 years, and my record in Congress bears me out." On the voting machines he will be candidate of both Republican and Fusion parties.

Robert Moses, State park commissioner, endorsed LaGuardia's candidacy, calling O'Brien "discredited" and McKee "the creature" of Secretary of State Flynn and James A. Farley.

Shawville Postmaster Named.

Mrs. Josephine V. Wilson was appointed acting postmaster yesterday at Shawville, Va., according to the Associated Press.

Pecora Scores Tammany Rule In Radio Talk

Speaking as Candidate for District Attorney, He Raps Crain.

Lack of law enforcement under a Tammany administration has brought New York into competition with Chicago as a racketeer's "paradise," Ferdinand Pecora, candidate for district attorney of New York on the McKee ticket, last night told a radio audience in a campaign address from Washington.

Referring to Tammany as the "political arm of Curry & Co.," Pecora attacked activities of Thomas C. T. Crain as district attorney of New York.

Pecora opened his address with a disavowal that Postmaster General Farley or Edward J. Flynn are "bosses" of McKee's party.

He said he subscribed to the Fusion ticket's insistence "that this is a campaign to rid New York City of the evils of political 'bossism.'"

He charged, however, that the Fusion party is "ignoring the 'bossism' that has dictated the selection of candidates on that ticket."

He declared the administration of William Dodge, Tammy's present candidate for district attorney, would be a repetition of the Crain regime.

Pecora said he was refused the nomination in 1929 by Tammany "because its members had ample reason to know that they could not dictate to me."

Controlling Imports.

Section 3 (e) of the National Recovery Act gives the President large powers to restrict imports of articles that are entering the United States "in substantial quantities or increasing ratio to domestic production of any competitive article or articles and on such terms or under such conditions as to render ineffective or seriously endanger the maintenance of any code or agreement under this title." The President has issued an Executive order accordingly, outlining the method of procedure to be followed in handling complaints from interested parties and giving effect to the section in question.

The NRA is empowered to make preliminary investigations and transmit its recommendations to the President, who may either dismiss the complaint or else direct the Tariff Commission to make another investigation. On the basis of the facts disclosed, the President may take such action as he considers necessary to safeguard codified industries. Thus he may order special duties to be levied, fix import quotas, or forbid the importation of certain articles unless the importer previously has obtained a license "pursuant to such regulations as the President may prescribe."

This Executive order, foreshadowing greater control over imports, is a logical, and indeed inevitable, adjunct of the price-raising policies that the Administration is pursuing. The recovery act has raised the labor costs of codified industries and increased per unit overhead charges in many cases by imposing limitations upon working time and authorizing restrictions upon the utilization of machinery. Apart from such increases in costs, additional outlays for industrial raw materials have been made necessary by the rise in prices resulting from speculative anticipation of monetary inflation. The net result of so-called controlled inflation and psychological inflation has been a widespread, and in some cases very pronounced, increase in domestic production costs, with a prospect of further advances if the policy of raising the level of general prices by progressive depreciation of the gold value of the dollar should succeed.

Under such extraordinary conditions an upward adjustment of tariff rates, or possibly resort to quotas, may be unavoidable. In order to provide an offset for the handicaps imposed upon American industry by the recovery program, tariff advances designed to eliminate these handicaps should not be confused with increases in import duties which are intended to afford more protection to American producers against foreign goods. If Section 3 (e) is invoked for the purpose of giving effect to the Administration's recovery program presumably the result will be simply to repair recently made breaches in the existing tariff wall.

The depreciation of the dollar also is a factor which has to be taken into account in trying to determine to what extent an induced rise in domestic prices has weakened the ability of American industry to compete with foreign imports. In cases in which prices within the country have advanced by an amount just sufficient to offset the decline in the external gold value of the dollar, the American producer would not appear at first glance to have been either helped or harmed. However, the situation is complicated by reason of the fact that the currencies of most countries selling in this market are more heavily depreciated than the dollar.

It is an undeniable fact that imports have been increasing in recent months at a more rapid rate than exports. In June, an import excess was reported for the first time since August, 1931, and again in August of this year a substantial import excess appeared, reflecting a more than seasonal increase in imports, without a corresponding advance in exports. The recent rise in importing activity undoubtedly is due in part to a speeding up of buying orders in anticipation of higher prices. How far it has been the result of an alleged influx of low-cost goods attracted by the higher dollar values of recent months can only be determined after detailed investigations such as those contemplated by the Executive order.

Obviously the findings of the Tariff Commission will be tentative, and revisions frequently will be called for; but in a world of shifting price levels, and fluctuating currencies, tariff rates must be changed, too, in order to adapt them to radically altered competitive interrelationships among nations.

British Farm Regulation.

The new agricultural marketing act now in operation in Great Britain is making planned production compulsory for the farmer there. In 1931 the Labor government enacted a law permitting farmers to plan their production if they so desired, but the more recent measure, sponsored by the Conservatives, extends the authority of the government, giving it power to compel planned output and marketing. Each of the various branches of farming is under the control of a board with power to issue licenses to producers and to make contracts for sale in their behalf. Unregistered producers of regulated commodities are not allowed to supply the wholesale market.

The new law is intended to provide a basis which will supply accurate information and facilitate the making of advantageous trade agreements with other nations covering agricultural produce. A committee of five members will advise the government on the probable home output and the quantity of any particular commodity which should be permitted to enter from abroad. The Board of Trade, henceforth, will have authority to call upon farmers for information, and to secure from traders and those storing agricultural products inventories of their stocks.

The present law must be interpreted in accordance with the Dominion tariff preferences agreed upon at Ottawa and the new commercial treaties with the Scandinavian countries, Germany, Argentina and Iceland. In some cases Britain is pledged to import certain minimum amounts of butter, meats, etc. In other cases the agreements do not specify a fixed minimum. Denmark, for example, is entitled to supply 60 per cent of the total of foreign bacon imported.

The wide powers given the government by the act, which was fought by the Labor party, have resulted in charges of socialism against the Conservatives. The government itself denies the accusation.

A Housing Experiment.

Plans for a number of low-cost housing projects in the District of Columbia, to be financed by the Public Works Administration, appear to be moving toward consummation. The activities of various groups interested in the problem are being coordinated by a single committee of which Commissioner Reichelderfer is chairman. Definite recommendations are to be worked out for presentation to the P.W.A.

Funds have been allotted to a number of municipalities and private groups for slum clearance projects. But some officials are anxious to construct model projects of this kind under direct supervision of the Government to create employment and encourage State, municipal and private efforts along this line.

Replacement of unsightly and insanitary dwellings by modern houses and apartments is highly desirable, of course, from the social point of view, but it involves formidable economic problems. There is no way of determining in advance whether the Government can clear away slums, erect suitable residential buildings in their place, and sell these buildings to private concerns without incurring substantial losses.

T. R. Settle, secretary of the Park and Planning Commission, regards the proposed District project as a "demonstration" of what may be accomplished through low-cost housing programs. Following a conference attended by officials of the District, the Park and Planning Commission and the Public Works Administration, as well as Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, it was said that the Government has no intention of going into this branch of the real estate business in Washington.

Apparently no decision has been reached as to whether the Administration will undertake directly extensive construction of low-cost dwellings in other parts of the country as a means of providing employment. Plans for the creation of a Federal housing corporation to erect and sell, or lease, low-cost housing units were announced about two weeks ago. But the corporation has not yet been organized. Lack of experience in this field seems to be inducing officials to cogitate at length upon the practicability of a large-scale Federal housing program.

Complaint of a "Cliff Dweller."

A valued friend of The Post, who signs her communication "An Old Inhabitant," sends in a vigorous protest against the removal of the monumental columns which stand between the White House and the War Department. Formerly they were the pillars of massive gates, and similar gates and pillars once graced the entrance to the small thoroughfare between the White House and the Treasury. The gates have long since disappeared, and now it is rumored that the last columns are to go, in response to the demand for clear motorway space.

"I was born and raised here," writes our friend, "and there are certain things that are landmarks. If motorists do not like those columns, let them stay out of that neighborhood. Washington is no longer Washington to the old inhabitant. In another ten years even the name of the city can be changed, and we can forget the old town. Trees, houses, streets and landmarks have been ruthlessly destroyed since 1915. For goodness' sake start a protest campaign to leave the 'cliff dwellers' a few recollections of the old place."

Surely our correspondent should not fix upon 1915 as the date when demolition of landmarks began in Washington. The tearing down process began long before that year—indeed, change has been the rule since the Ten Mile Square was laid out.

Andrew Jackson is supposed to be responsible for the eccentricity of Pennsylvania avenue at Fifteenth street, where it suddenly dodges to avoid collision with the Treasury. And Andrew's protégé, Mr. Polk, laid the cornerstone of the Smithsonian building, which intrudes upon the Mall. Some "cliff dwellers" insist that the greatest piece of destruction was the retrocession to Virginia of the District south of the Potomac, a lopping off of 30 square miles in one fell swoop.

Temporary buildings were rushed up during the war, occupying part of the Mall. Of all the structures in Washington, the temporaries seem to be most permanent! Stone and brick fail to make way for steel and glass, but the temporary lath and paper buildings stand immutable, except for leaky roofs.

It was sad to see noble trees and storied buildings torn down to widen Connecticut and other avenues and streets, but better structures rise and the trees return. Fortunately the firehouse where the Oldest Inhabitant foregather is a fixture which does not change.

Beyond all question, the "cliff dwellers" should be accommodated by leaving a few landmarks as refreshment of their recollections, but there must be progress also.

Freedom of the Press.

New York is recalling that it was 200 years ago this month that the scene was laid there which resulted in a momentous victory for free speech. With the arrival of the royal governor, Sir William Cosby, judicial appointments and elections for the assembly precipitated bitter political contests. The arbitrary acts of the British governor aroused strong anti-Cosby sentiment which found no medium of expression.

John Peter Zenger, who had arrived as a lad from Germany when the press was free there than it is now, secured backing from the opposition to start the New York Weekly Journal. This paper, began its independent career by publishing an article declaring: "We see men's deeds destroyed, judges arbitrarily replaced, new courts erected without consent of the legislature, and men of known estate denied their votes."

Falling to have the grand jury indict Zenger, Gov. Cosby proceeded against him through his attorney general for publishing "false, seditious and scandalous libels" against the representative of the crown. Zenger lay in jail for seven months, but with the help of his wife continued his publication. After several defense lawyers had been disbarred, the famous jurist, Andrew Hamilton, came from Philadelphia to appear for Zenger.

Zenger's defense was based upon the principle that publication of a true statement in the press is no libel, in opposition to the old contention that "the greater the truth the greater the libel." Cosby was not anxious to have the details of the charges tested as to their truthfulness. The defense contended that the cause involved not merely a poor printer or New York alone, but was one whose consequences might affect "every freeman that lives under a British government on the main of America."

The jury promptly declared Zenger not guilty. Hamilton was feted by the city and Zenger proceeded to make his Journal an active opposition organ. Many held that this decision was no small factor in crystallizing that public sentiment which later resulted in the adoption of the first amendment to the Constitution providing that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." Today no principle is more jealously guarded by Americans.

There seems to be no doubt that the new gold policy is acclaimed 100 per cent—by the gold miners.

Among current international conflicts it is noted that, while the United States is being urged to reach the ideal goal set by 1926, the same year is being held up to the French as offering a horrible example of inflation.

France has more professional cabinet makers than any other nation and she believes in keeping them in practice.

Noisy Motor Horns.

From the Springfield Union.

Word comes from Rome that Mussolini is about to begin a drive against unnecessary noises and particularly the excessive use of shrill motor horns, a practice that appears to be more in evidence there than anywhere else. Because winding and narrow streets, often with no sidewalks, are the rule in the Eternal City, and walking in the streets is more or less common there, horn-toting is more excusable there than in most other cities, and the bearing of Italian law on motorists that injure pedestrians is said to encourage the incessant sounding of horns until it becomes a habit. The problem is being attacked in several ways, including an attempt to establish better control over pedestrian traffic.

The London Times recently printed a sharp attack on "the endless, useless, abominable din of mechanical motor horns, the needless, heedless use of which the authorities make no feeblest attempt to stop." The head of a noise-suppression organization in Paris recently declared that the noise nuisance was worse in the French capital than in London. He stressed the point that horn-toting as a safety device is often superfluous, while as a reliance in the absence of other precautions it is likely to be ineffectual. "Any motorist," he observed, "who attempts to cross an intersecting thoroughfare at full speed, relying solely upon his horn, risks a serious accident."

Various examples are cited by this critic regarding the unnecessary use of the horn. One of the most common uses of the horn is as a warning before passing another car, but in a city street and even on an open highway this device for making greater speed is often employed in violation of safety considerations. In general, the point is well taken that greater care in running a car and less noise in the same connection promise better results in terms of public welfare. In some American cities, at least, there has been a moderation of the noisier horns on the part of many drivers, with no apparent sacrifice of public safety.

HOW TO UNDERSTAND THE MANAGED DOLLAR.

To understand the President's new proposal of a managed dollar it is first necessary for us to take a dollar and study it at close range in a nonpartisan manner. What is it that impresses you the moment you look at a dollar? Its complete helplessness. Even George Washington looks uncomfortable, apprehensive and a little frightened. He is clearly not the confident, smiling, devil-may-care Washington of 1792.

This being so, the question before the house is: Does the dollar need a manager? The conclusion of most people will be, we feel, that the dollar needs not only a manager but a police escort. You may ask, quite naturally, "How has the dollar managed to get along all these years without a manager?" The answer is that it was a better behaved dollar, a more dependable dollar, the sort of dollar you could trust anywhere.

This dignified, well-bred dollar has disappeared. In the vernacular of the economic world, it has gone to hell. So what? So we have got to manage it. Whom do we mean by "we"? One question at a time, please. Don't crowd us.

To proceed. The dollar has been drifting. The half dollar has been drifting. Even the quarters have been having their troubles keeping their heads above water. And when the dollars, the half dollars and the quarters of a nation drift what happens to the people? They drift. Thus we have a nation of drifters.

Having made the fundamental economic and monetary facts plain, let us take up the question: Whether we are drifting? Fair enough? But nobody knows; even our best friends won't tell us. So what?

So we let the manager to give us a commodity dollar. What is a commodity dollar? I object, you'll say. Objection overruled. The stenographer will please repeat the question. The question was: What is the commodity dollar? Well, experts differ. Peggy Hopkins Joyce says the commodity dollar is the very basis of all true love. Arthur Brisbane says a gorilla could lick them both.

Assuming, however, that we favor the commodity dollar, what is it? It is a dollar in terms of commodities. It is the butter and egg dollar, the marmalade and toast dollar, the three-piece suit dollar.

Let us explain. Suppose that last Tuesday the dollar was worth three pounds of spareribs. Next Tuesday, let us assume spareribs have outrun the dollar and are now two pounds to the dollar. What do we do? We write Washington. Washington puts the spareribs back where they belong. Or something. You can't expect us to remember all the details.

But suppose you do not like spareribs? This will be taken up in a second installment to be written as soon as we are over the dizzy spell.

Old Toys Bore the Child That Has Learned to Expect a New One Daily

By Robert Quillen.

Yesterday I asked a barber how large an income would be required to gratify all of his desires. He made swift mental calculation and answered: "Three thousand a year would buy everything I want."

A bachelor physician, who had charge of a hospital in France, answered even more modestly. "Two hundred a month," said he, "would satisfy me."

Others as truthful might require half a million dollars or more, depending altogether on the tastes and desires absorbed from their environment and training. But in no case would the income insure happiness.

Jack Dempsey said in his ghost-written autobiography: "Money is important only when you haven't got it."

That expresses the whole philosophy of money, with this single exception: that one income seems no larger than another when you get used to it.

When people say that money doesn't bring happiness, they are using the wrong verb. Money does bring happiness, instant and heart-filling, to those who suffer for want of money.

But it doesn't maintain happiness. The explanation is not found in any fault of money itself, but in a deep-rooted peculiarity of human nature. We take for granted the thing that is usual. Sunshine, green grass and trees, liberty and good health are accepted without gratitude because we are accustomed to them.

So it is with any given income. If we have $2,000 a year we think $3,000 would make us happy. But when we have become accustomed to $3,000, it seems ordinary and insufficient. And though $23,000 seems all the money there is the first year we have it, this also loses its magic soon and no longer is a factor in making us happy or unhappy.

The money that brings temporary happiness is not a specified sum, but more. As the drinker must consume larger and larger quantities to get the same kick, so those who hope to find happiness in money must somehow win a larger income as soon as they become accustomed to the present one.

There you have one explanation of our national unrest. By inheritance and practice we are climbers, forever hoping to win happiness by making more money, and our own nature dooms us to continual and inevitable disappointment.

Marriages can't satisfy a vanity that finds joy only in making new conquests.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Book on Correct English.

While English is the easiest language in the world for foreigners to learn to write, to read, and to understand, it is the most difficult of all tongues to speak with correct pronunciation. No other language in the past or present pronounces the vowels so clearly, as we do; and there are innumerable exceptions to rules.

Many foreigners think they can pronounce English accurately, but they flatter themselves. Give them this one sentence and watch their agonizing struggles: "Though the tough cough and hiccup plough me through."

As English is our mother-tongue, we should treat it with respect, both in pronunciation and in grammar and syntax. There is also such a thing as good taste. One of the most useful little books on correctness and elegance in the use of English is the small dictionary called "Modern English Usage," by H. W. Fowler. There has always been a difference of opinion as to whether our guide should be the dictionary or the best usage, and here we have a dictionary of the best usage. Another good book is "Constructive English," by Francis Kingsley Ball. This has excellent chapters on "Do's and Don'ts," and a long list of words usually mispronounced. The best book I have ever seen as a help to those who wish to write well, those who have an ambition to become authors, is "English Composition," by the late Barrett Wendell, but I am afraid it is out of print. The public libraries should have it.

A Sound Citizen.
Topic: Capital.

Farmers, like all other classes, criticize Government, but chiefly on the ground of extravagance rather than incompetency or corruption. It is other classes of people than either hard-working farmers or laboring forces who are apt to complain that the Government is "no good" on general principles.

It was an unusual case, however, in Idaho, where a farmer died recently and when his will was opened it appeared that he had left the residue of his estate, after some bequests, amounting to $16,000 to the Treasury of the United States, "to which Government," his last will and testament declared, "I owe a great debt of gratitude for the privileges of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness under the Stars and Stripes."

See Recognition Coming.

President Roosevelt is alleged to have decided to proceed to the Soviet recognition prior to the opening of Congress in January next, as to offer no chance of opposition by any possible opponents. Even if the formal recognition might be delayed, America's commercial interest in Soviet Russia makes the rapprochement inevitable, and Japan must be prepared to meet the consequence.

War Credits Not Good.
Topic: Capital.

Europe is talking about "the next war," but not saying much about how it is going to pay for it. None of the nations has any outside credit. They can all tax their people to the last farthing, but the last war demonstrated that they can't make the conquered side pay. Since they are not paying their contract debts to the United States, their war credit is not good. It reached its peak probably for all time in the last experiment. Europe therefore can have a war if its statesmen hanker for one, but the chances are they will have to pay for it on the rail and not look to this country or anywhere else to take promises to pay in place of real money, or for real goods.

League Failure.

Portland Press Herald.
After 14 years to measure up to what was expected of it. It has now lost Japan and Germany and of the great powers all that remain affiliated with it are Great Britain, France and Italy. As a guarantor of world peace the league has been shown to be impotent. The decision of the American people was to hold the United States aloof from it and events have demonstrated that this was the part of wisdom.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Barger

THE BASIC machinery has just about been set up, or to use another phrase, the groundwork has about been laid, for the world's greatest sociological experiment in the Tennessee Valley. Or rather, I take it, this is the case because nearly every week we are informed by the publicity department of the TVA that more books have been added to the valley's library. By now they must have at least five shelves which the late Dr. Eliot insisted, so long as they were his shelves, afforded one a liberal education.

I forget how the appropriation for the valley project was split up, so much for the building of dams, so much for construction of plants, and one gets the impression now, an equal amount for books. The thing, you know, grew away beyond Senator Norris's fondest dreams. He contemplated a vast water-power in the possession of the people in order that they might enjoy electrically lighted homes and electrically operated farms. Those who are running the project intend to give the people a culture that will make it possible for them to reap the academic benefits from these material things.

As a result, the adding of books to the library has perforce proceeded with the turning of dirt and the laying of preliminary bricks. That this turning of dirt and laying of bricks constitutes the sordid side of this undertaking in the mind of Dr. Morgan, a rather uncooperative phase that he would rather not discuss, is evidenced by the fact that seldom does the publicity mention it at all. The emphasis is decidedly on the books. One who did not know about things would think, indeed, that it was the building of another Congressional Library that is in progress, rather than the water-power and flood and harbor development of a great valley.

I expect any time now to see the publicity released with the kind of books that have been obtained. Carl Marx's works undoubtedly, as well as those of Schopenhauer and surely Carlyle's essay on "What Makes a Man," or whatever it was along that line.

I am afraid, though, that in the great plan to uplift the valley people there has been a total neglect of voice culture. With the books that have been obtained and are still being acquired there is no reason why the valley people should not become among the best read people anywhere, with such broad cultural attainments as would make them a delight in any drawing room. But before they can be fitted into the Eastern pattern which I suppose is the cultural measurement which Dr. Morgan and his fellows have in mind, something manifestly must be done about their voices. They have none of the Eastern nuances now. Rather they are soft and quaint.

If they are permitted to come East—really I suppose it is the idea to transplant them in the East once they pass their tests—if they are permitted to come up here without something having been done to their enunciation, they will have been done a grievous wrong, or as they would say in their native way, they would be done wrong by. They will have the Eastern learning without the Eastern speech, which will make them seem decidedly grotesque.

It would not be a case of their not being able to make a living up here, because with their native shrewdness they have for years been able to go to that great center of culture, New York, and sell the New Yorkers gold bricks. New York is fairly well settled with the "Barbara this and Barbara that" of Virginia, who tell so engagingly of riding to the hounds on their Southern plantations and get by very easily without doing a thing.

This is not looked upon as a cultural attainment or a cultural living, though. Instead, it is considered an unfair practice of trade.

When it comes right down to it, in fact, it would not be surprising if this whole move to give a culture to the valley folk is really not a trade scheme, an effort to bring them down to the level of the smart people of the East.

Autumn.
Splash of scarlet, splash of gold,
Mornings touched with autumn's cold.
Weary fields beneath the sun
Resting with their labor done.
Sorrow and sickle put away,
Night is longer now than day.

Later now the sun to rise,
Gone are birds and butterflies.
Just a few brave blossoms stay,
Relicts of their kindred day.
Still with courage carrying on,
Till their strength is wholly gone.

Neither field nor forest taints
Nature's purpose with complaints.
Chilled by frost unto the heart
Silently the flowers depart.
Stand the trees, like warriors bold
Dressed in scarlet and in gold.

Nothing sad or fearful here
At the twilight of the year.
These October mornings glow
Just as if they seem to know
Past all doubt and questioning
Life is an eternal thing.

2nd Concert To Open With "Euryanthe"

Dr. Hans Kindler Selects Weber's Overture for Tonight.

As the opening number of the second concert by the National Symphony Orchestra tonight in Constitution Hall, Dr. Hans Kindler has chosen the overture to "Euryanthe" by Carl Maria von Weber. This composition came from the pen of a small, narrow-chested man, with long arms, refined but large hands, thin, pale, irregular face, with brilliant eyes flashing through his spectacles; mighty forehead, fringed by a few straggling locks; awkward and clumsy, but charming in spite of all, especially when he smiled.

Weber was a gentle idealist, frail in body but keen in mind. He understood people, and knew how to write for them. His melodies have the subtle tenacity of folk songs; they cling to the memory and spring spontaneously to the lips. "Euryanthe" has been appraised by some authorities as Weber's best opera. Robert Schumann said, "from end to end it is one chain of sparkling gems." Charming, poetic, dramatic, it forms a turning point in the history of opera.

Chausson's Symphony. Ernest Chausson, whose Symphony in B flat will be played tonight, was a pupil of Cesar Franck, the great French composer. Chausson's nature was delicate and sensitive, gently melancholy. His music is a reflection of his character; it is refined in expression, simple and direct, deep, thoughtful and sincere.

The National Symphony's third selection is the "Oriental Impressions" of Henry Eichheim, an American composer who interprets the music of the Far East for the ears of the Occident. Mr. Eichheim, a scholarly musician with the winning manner of a diplomat, has lived for many years in the Orient while gathering material for his compositions. His collection of native instruments is unrivaled. Many of these he lends for orchestral use, in order to obtain certain effects of tone-color that are impossible to produce otherwise.

To Play Liszt's "Tasso." The last number on the program is the symphonic poem, "Tasso," by Franz Liszt, a portrait of one poet by another. The composer used as the motive in this work a theme that he heard sung by gondoliers in Venice, a song with Tasso's own words.

Liszt describes this theme as having "a slow, plaintive cadence of monotonous mourning; the gondoliers, however, by drawing certain notes, give it a peculiar coloring, and the monotonous drawing tones, heard at a distance, produce an effect not dissimilar to the reflection of long stripes of fading light upon a mirror of water."

Liszt has given us the soul of the poet in music, the soul of a man who knew the bitter anguish of one who was destined to die in madness.

U. S. Asks Bids On Relief Food

Vast Supply of Meat Is Sought; Grain Also Purchased.

(Associated Press.)

Millions more pounds of foodstuffs were sought by the Government for the dual purpose of feeding the needy and strengthening the commodity markets.

Harry L. Hopkins, the Emergency Relief administrator, asked for bids on 15,000,000 pounds of canned beef to be distributed through wholesale and retail grocery stores. The bids will be opened November 6 at the relief offices here.

Asserting that the purpose was to provide wholesome food for the needy and to help stabilize the beef market, Hopkins said that only the better cuts of meat from cows of good quality would be accepted. Another requirement is that the meat shall be cut after the contract is awarded.

Meanwhile, it became known that the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation up to yesterday has purchased 6,800,500 bushels of wheat, of which 700,500 was cash wheat. These purchases included 5,000,000 bushels of December futures, and 1,000,000 bushels of May futures.

Verdict in Stuart Death Again Held

Coroner Delays Until His Widow Can Testify.

Without stating whether he jumped or fell to his death, Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night issued a temporary death certificate in the case of Maj. Robert Y. Stuart, chief of the United States Forest Service.

Maj. Stuart plunged to his death Monday from his offices in the Forestry Building, 580 F street northwest. A final verdict will be issued as soon as Mrs. Stuart is able to confer with detectives who investigated the death.

Funeral services were held yesterday at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase. Interment was made in Carlisle, Pa.

Almas Shrine Indorses Post Opera Offering

Hundreds of Readers Take Chance to Buy Seats at 30 to 55 Cents.

Almas Temple of Shriners, with a membership of more than 4,500 Washingtonians, yesterday indorsed The Washington Post and the International Opera Company in bringing to Capital music lovers a week of grand opera at popular prices.

Potential Warren W. Grimes, in announcing Almas Temple's support of the movement, said: "The Shrine, in sponsoring a week of grand opera at the Washington Auditorium, beginning Sunday, November 19, is presenting operatic stars at popular prices for the first time in Washington."

Hundreds called at the Stieff piano store, 1340 G street northwest, yesterday, to take advantage of The Post's first offering of seats at half the opera company prices. Seats will be available, to each person carrying a copy of The Washington Post, at prices ranging from 30 to 55 cents until the 3,000 seats for each of the eight operas assigned The Post for its readers has been sold. Maurice Frank, manager of the opera company, said.

The International Opera Company includes such stars as Carmella Ponselle, Martino-Rossi and Emilia Vergeri. Operas to be presented include "Ciocondia," Tuesday night, November 21; "Aida," Thursday night; "Trovatore," Saturday night, and "Faust," Sunday night.

Marturano told police the men engaged him in a penny pitching game and took all his money before he realized they were cheating him. They fled in a car with Georgia tags when he called a policeman.

Registration of Machine Guns Considered in Fight on Crime

Legal Possibilities Studied Looking to Order by President.

Registration of machine guns may be sought in the Department of Justice's campaign to clean up gangsters and organized crime, it was indicated yesterday.

A Presidential order may be sought. Legal possibilities of controlling distribution of the guns is being studied by the staff of Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, head of the anticrime campaign.

Possibility of confiscating all machine guns found in possession of known gangsters is being considered. The scheme contemplates seizure of the weapons whether gangster is under suspicion of a particular crime or not.

Statutes providing for protection of law enforcement officers are believed by Keenan's office to afford legal backing for any registration order.

Job Insurance Urged for U. S. To Officials

Secretary Perkins Backs Plan; Britons Tell of its Success.

Enactment at the earliest moment of State unemployment insurance laws was urged yesterday by Secretary Perkins at a meeting of 100 labor leaders, economists and State officials at the Willard Hotel.

The meeting was addressed by Sir William Beveridge, originator of the British unemployment insurance law, and Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, former administrator of the law. They explained in detail the operation of the law.

"The depression has made dramatic the need for unemployment insurance," Miss Perkins said. "We are interested in building up some reserve out of which compensation could be paid in times of unemployment. Such a system should have a tendency to hold unemployment fluctuation to a minimum."

Miss Perkins urged that State conferences be held for general discussion of unemployment insurance and that the people be acquainted with the problem. After the meeting, Miss Perkins explained that she had no plan for Federal unemployment insurance but she hoped that some system could be worked out for cooperation among the States.

"After 20 years of trial in England there is no thought of abandoning the unemployment insurance system," Sir William said. "The system has brought us through the depression without civil disturbance and without starvation."

Insurance funds come from three sources, he explained: From the employer, the employee and the State. Each contributes the same amount. Each worker has an insurance book and on every pay day the employer gives him a stamp, bought from the government, to put in his book. Half the cost of the stamp is paid by the employer and half is deducted from the employee's pay.

Sir William urged that any insurance system be started in good times and not in time of depression, because it would be necessary to accumulate funds before it could begin to function properly.

In answer to a question of the attitude of employers toward the insurance system, he said, "no sensible employer would vote to abolish it."

Youth Bound Over In Robbery Case

Woman Beaten and Left Unconscious, Charge.

Charged with robbery, Bernard Nelson, 17, colored, of 132 Rhode island avenue northwest, was bound over to the grand jury on $15,000 bond when he pleaded not guilty in Police Court yesterday.

Police said Nelson confessed to taking a pocketbook Saturday night from Mrs. Lulu Carter, 28, of 1181 Third street northeast, at Third street and Florida avenue northeast. He is alleged to have knocked her unconscious.

More Arsenic Found In Cabbage Shipment

Careful inspection of all foodstuffs at the wholesale market, Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, was ordered yesterday by Dr. William C. Fowler, District health officer, following discovery of 25 more crates of arsenic-coated cabbage.

The amount of arsenic was not sufficient to cause death, but would cause illness if eaten, Dr. Fowler said. Department chemists began analysis of a coating found on crates of apples.

A Footnote on Strategy The Administration Is Inexpert At the Tactics of Radicalism

By William Harlan Hale.

Now that we are finishing the eighth month of our own bloodless revolution, one may look back to appraise the general quality of the tactics employed for its achievement.

That the enthusiasm of the country over the Roosevelt policies is not as ardent as it was in July, is fully apparent. But that is not a fact from which one can draw any grand-sounding conclusion to the effect that "the new deal is a flop."

On the contrary, its basic principles seem to have entrenched themselves deeply in the popular mind. Its application to industry, moreover, seems to imply a process whose nature is irreversible. What is the dominant tone of criticism one gets from the popular mind? Let me submit that there is no dominant tone of criticism at all. The dominant tone is one of confusion, bafflement in the face of the incredible complexity of the program.

At first that confusion resolved itself to wonder, as signs of concrete betterment appeared, but now, as the smags gather in the path, that confusion resolves itself into doubt. I would say then that there is really only a small minority that actually is entranced by the theory of the "new deal"—that minority being made up chiefly of industrialists and financiers who have had much to do with specific issues of the program, and who actually know what is all about.

But the general public is mystified. It has an idea, of course, of the goal that is in view. But it cannot make much sense out of the means being employed; it does not see, for example, why Federal salaries should be ruthlessly cut while private business is admonished to raise wages; why there is so much talk of Government economy when everyone else is encouraged to spend lavishly. It does not understand what the attitude toward labor is, or why the administration is toward labor and as to the mysteries of the new monetary policy it is utterly in the dark.

In darkness, of course, there may be mass desertions from the leader. But on the other hand, if we become historical and look at the great revolutions in Europe, we shall find the popular mind there too was pretty much in the dark as to what actually was going on, or what the policies were.

With the chaotic sequence of tribunals, committees, directors and consulates in revolutionary France, the common people were utterly bewildered. The Russian proletariat, never well up on Marxian theology, could only with great difficulty trace events from October, 1917. The German middle classes, in raising Hitler to power, could not make out whether their leader was a reactionary or a radical. But they followed—they followed right through the darkness.

What then is the difference between those European revolutions and our own, beyond the question of degree of violence? The difference seems to be that in the European cases the people were perfectly clear as to what it was they were revolting against. The French citizen had his aristocrat; the Russian proletarian had his bourgeois or his "kulak"; the German commoner had his Jew. The fact that the path of revolution was devious, or the goal obscure, made very little difference.

The people were kept in line by Sazo to Talk on NRA.

Hull May Meet Litvinoff Here Before Sailing

South American Trip Can Be Delayed Enough for Brief Greeting.

Indications last night were that Secretary Hull would at least be able to shake hands with his opposite number, Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, before he departs for South America and the Montevideo Conference.

Although Hull's plans to sail on November 4 from New York on the Santa Barbara had not yet been definitely changed, there existed the "possibility, not the probability," according to State Department officials, that the Secretary might travel overland to New Orleans and join his ship in Panama, thereby gaining an extra couple of days in Washington.

It is also possible that the Secretary might postpone his sailing to November 11, when the rest of the American delegation is to leave, and proceed directly to Uruguay. President Roosevelt expressed the hope yesterday that his senior Cabinet member would be able to greet the Soviet foreign minister before departing southward. The President was determined, however, that nothing should interfere with Hull's keeping his engagement for the Pan-American gathering which opens December 11.

Litvinoff is likely to arrive in Washington November 6, it was said in well-informed quarters last night.

Grau's Cabinet Offers to Quit

U. S. Ship Stands By as Workers Form Soviet, Hold American.

Havana, Oct. 25 (AP).—While a United States destroyer stood off the coast of Cuba tonight to aid in checking serious labor disorders, it became known President Grau's cabinet went to the palace prepared to resign.

The resignation was to have been followed by naming of a commission of 20 to virtually control Cuban affairs.

A member of the cabinet said tonight "We will not be an obstacle to any understanding with the opposition." President Grau held the resignations in abeyance.

Another cabinet member said tonight "a rapprochement with the opposition must come. It is the only remedy." He said President Grau was highly optimistic.

Serious labor troubles at American-owned sugar mills in widely separated parts of the island continued to worry Americans. The United States destroyer Twigs was standing by off Antilla, in Oriente Province, near the Alto Cedro sugar mill, where C. M. Jervis, the American manager, was held by strikers who have formed a Soviet regime.

Smart Leather Handbag Leads Double Life

Flap Arrangement Provides Compartments for Letters, Change, Mirror.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Leading a double life is accomplished with ease and verve by a pocketbook that has two distinct sections. A large roomy pocket and letter case are disclosed when one flap is lifted. Coin purse and mirror are in the deep pocket beneath the other flap. This neat, tailored bag may be had in black, brown or gray. The material is glo-calf, which wears as well as genuine leather and resembles it closely. There's a looped strap to carry it by, as you dash down the avenue. The price, at an F street shop, is $1.

A small cigarette lighter is tucked in a pocket of another purse in this collection. Suede-like material trims the black, glo-calf modified pouch. Another bag has a long, narrow cigarette case among its fittings. The same shop also has squarish cloth bags that look well with tweed suits or swaggar coats. Any bag in the collection is $1.

Dinner dresses sound expensive. They usually are. But the shopper unearthed some yesterday that are decidedly modest in their demands on pocketbooks. One little love, in black sheer crepe, is collared with bugle beads that will twinkle bewitchingly above the Sunday night supper table.

Other black sheer crepes, fashioned on long, flowing lines, have velvet cap sleeves. The price, believe it or not, is $3.98. It was formerly twice that amount.

Several street and afternoon frocks at that price are in the collection.

The mirror has a frivolous long handle; the comb is narrow and sturdy; the brush is firm and bristly. When placed together these three pieces make a dresser set to thrill the feminine heart. Simulated lucite is the material. Each piece is decorated with small black and gold flowers in conventional design. Jade, maize and rose are the colors of the sets.

It's a pleasure to spend quiet evenings around the home fireside when one is comfortably garbed in corduroy lounging pajamas. If the door bell should give an exciting ring it could be answered without a moment's hesitation on the part of the pajama wearer. She would know that she looked even more alluring than in a daytime frock. These pajamas are one-piece styles and have amusing leg-o'-mutton sleeves. The colors are green, blue, red, maroon and orange. The price is $3.95.

The belle of the ball can dash in from the football game and within a few minutes dash out again in a shimmering evening gown that fits her vital young figure to perfection. How does she do it? Well, her greatest time-saver is her foundation garment. In one piece, it consists of two-way stretch girdle and lace brassiere, cut to the waist in back. One minute flat is the time required for getting into the thing. Price, $3.95.

All the way from China have come handmade cotton flate oblongs which may be used as plate doilies, dressing table covers or chair arm tidies. The person who has the handy things will probably think up several more uses for them. White and ecru are skillfully blended in an attractive floral design. These oblongs, 12 by 18 inches, are priced at 15 cents. The same downtown store has chair back tidies in the same material and at the same price. They measure 11 by 17 inches.

Squirt little pumpkins, filled with mints, wrapped in orange cellophane, with grinning black cats on top, are fopping to break into many houses between now and October 31. They want to sit on party tables where they'll find a lusty welcome from the guests at a Halloween frolic.

A similar favor is topped with a cat that not only looks good enough to eat but actually is. It's made of licorice. Lollipops dressed in Halloween costumes will keep the children quiet for 15 minutes or so.

These gay trifles are 10 cents each at a downtown department store. A triangle, filled with mints, wrapped in yellow cellophane, with place card attached by a paper chrysanthemum, is priced at 5 cents.

Eight velvet-covered hangers are attractively boxed with a dust-proof garment bag which is 6 inches long. That length should take care of all dresses except those long, slinky evening affairs.

The bag, in rose, blue, green, or orchid, is opened with snaps. Hangers, bag and fancy box with cellophane top cost $1.29.

Fashion's New Colored Coats Cheerful and Very Practical

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where articles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

New York, Oct. 26.—A lot of women who never expected to wear a colored coat are surprising themselves by stepping out in one this fall. Liking its cheerfulness, too, and finding it not a bit impractical as they had feared it might be.

That's because these colored coats—the greens, blues and reds—are dark enough, or soft enough to harmonize with many colors in dresses. Different, you see, from the clearer, harsher colors which are difficult to match up.

Green First Color. Green is the choice of most-fashion women. And there are two smart shades of it. One is dark and clear and goes under the name pineland. This shade has the happy faculty of being both somber and gay at the same time. In other words, you won't feel too bright for church nor too dull for the football game.

Black furs are particularly handsome on it while brown gives an extra rich, luxurious look.

The second shade of green has a slightly yellowed cast and is called olive. It's lighter, brighter and more sporty and is stunning with brown furs.

Blue in Fashion. Women who like blue find themselves right in fashion with the new color, blue eagle, a medium, vibrating shade which makes an effective background for gray furs. Then there's a deeper blue called corsair, a light, bright navy. On this any color fur goes well—black, brown, gray, red or silver fox. Livelier than any of these are the reds. Of course, wine is still smart and conservative. Newer are Chinese red, ruby or rumba—that's a gay, rusty tone that's cheery on a cold morning. Both black and brown furs look well on these reds. If you're considering a colored coat and are in doubt what fur you want on it, perhaps you'd like our new leaflet which lists the coat colors and the kinds of furs that go well with them. The coupon below tells how to receive it.

Meat Sundries Can Be Used In Many Ways

Heart, Kidneys and Brains Economical and Nourishing.

By Ruth Chambers.

Besides the well-known steaks, chops and roasts and all other cuts of meat, there are those "sundries" of beef, pork and lamb—heart, kidneys, brains and so on—which are the basis of unusual and delicious dishes. These are relished by epicures and yet, curiously enough, they are less expensive than many of the more familiar portions. Again it is the law of supply and demand. The average housewife is not accustomed to preparing them. It is easier to fall back upon a few oft-served cuts of meat. She hesitates to experiment.

However, in these days when food budgets are carefully apportioned, the high nutritional value of these less expensive meat dishes attracts her attention. Here is a way of giving her family a real treat and still being economical. Beef heart, for instance, is high in food value. But do you know how to prepare and serve it. Here is one way:

Heart Cooked with Rice.

1 heart
6 cups boiling water
1/2 cup rice
Salt and pepper
1/2 cup raisins, seeded
1/2 cup walnut meats
1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
Wash heart thoroughly. Cover with boiling water, simmer until tender. Add the uncooked rice and cook for 30 minutes; then add raisins, nuts, lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste. Bring to the boiling point. Lift heart to center of platter and surround with the rice, pouring the liquor over all.

Chateaufort of Tripe.

Have you ever cooked tripe? Here is a way of using it. Cut a pound of very thin tripe into thin shreds and then cut these crosswise into inch-long pieces. Slice a Spanish onion in very thin slices and cook in bacon fat or butter until the onion is yellowed. Add the tripe and let it get hot all the way through, but be careful not to burn it. Blend in 2 tablespoons of flour and a cup of stock or water. Stir until it boils and the flour is cooked. Season with salt and enough paprika to give it a red color. Serve it in a deep dish with an inch-thick blanket over it consisting of freshly chopped greens—watercress or lettuce or cooked spinach or cabbage.

Calf's Brains in Patty Shells.

Another dish for those with epicurean tastes and thrifty nature is made of calf's brains. This mixture is to be served in patty shells and may be the center of a luncheon party menu. Soak the brains in cold water for an hour, remove membrane and cook in boiling salted water, with enough vinegar added to acidulate slightly, for 20 minutes. Press through a colander, mix with 1/4 cup minced cooked chicken, 1 small slice of cooked ham, minced; 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese and 2 tablespoons of melted butter or cream. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Warm the mixture in a double boiler. Serve hot in the patty shells, garnished with minced parsley.

Liver on Toast.

Since liver should be included in the diet frequently, according to medical authorities, here is a way of serving this essential food: For lamb liver in gravy, to be served on toast, cut 1 pound of the liver into very thin slices or squares. Sprinkle the slices with salt, pepper and flour, brown them in bacon fat, add 1 cup milk. Cover and cook the meat slowly until tender. If a relief gravy desired, add more flour, made into a paste with cold water. Season with a dash of cayenne and a teaspoon of chili sauce or catsup. This is a tempting breakfast dish. Or it may be served with spaghetti for lunch.

French Dressing Bettina.

1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
3 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons vinegar
2-3 cup oil
2 tablespoons catsup
Mix ingredients in bottle. Cork and shake well. Store in icebox.

Mrs. Willebrandt Reveals Story of Russian Premier

MABEL WALKER WILLEBRANDT.

Maxim Litvinoff, Soon to Be President's Guest, Aided Search for Flier.

How Commissar of Foreign Affairs Maxim Litvinoff of Russia, soon to be the guest of President Roosevelt, once bent all his energies to aiding this country in recovering the body of an American flier, who perished in the frozen wastes of Siberia, was disclosed yesterday by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

In an exclusive interview, Mrs. Willebrandt, who herself aided the Washington Weather Bureau in directing rescue expeditions sent from this country, told the dramatic story of the long search for Carl Ben Eielson, vice president of the Alaskan Airways, who was lost in 1928.

Eielson disappeared on his fourth relief flight to the American Fur Co.'s ship, Mamuk, icebound at Cape North in the Arctic Ocean, below the Wrangel Islands, near Siberia. American and Alaskan planes failed to locate any sign of him. Our Government finally decided to abandon the effort, because of the danger to pilots scouting over that section of the Arctic.

Education Costs Less for Child in Small Town

Average Yearly Expenditure Is $70.35 Per Person; City Child Costs $104.17.

Not only do small school systems educate 20 per cent of all city school children, but they accomplished this task last year at an average expenditure of $70.35 per pupil for total current expenses, whereas the average in the larger cities is $104.17 per pupil.

This was shown in a first study of small city school system finances just completed by the Federal Office of Education. With a decrease, in 1932, of nearly $34,000,000 in receipts for current expenses, and an increase of nearly 1,000,000 children in enrollment over the school year 1930, small city school systems today face a major problem.

The small city school system is an important factor in the Nation's educational structure. Figures show that more than two-thirds of the school systems of the United States are in communities of less than 10,000.

In the Northeast section, representing all the New England States, the total current expenditures per pupil a year was $94.78. This was more than twice the sum spent per pupil in the Southern section, which includes Virginia, West Virginia, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, where the average dropped to $40.54.

This means that to keep a child in school costs in a small Northeastern community an average of 52 cents per day, and in the South 23 cents. The average per diem cost in schools in small cities for all sections of the country is 42 cents. More recent reports indicate that all these averages will be lower in 1933.

Tardy Scholar Just Seeking To Be Noticed

Teacher Advises Parents to Let Him Take Scolding.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (P).—A child who is persistently tardy at school may be doing nothing more than trying to bask in the limelight of parental attention, thinks Miss Nellie W. Birdsong, psychology instructor at the Maryland State Normal School at Towson.

"Children too frequently feel themselves the center of attention when repeated calls are made for them to get up in the morning, to hurry over their dressing and to eat their meals," said Miss Birdsong. "Flattered, they try to keep the center of the stage. A little seeming indifference on the part of parents and the throwing of responsibility upon the child for his lateness at school often will remedy such a situation."

Miss Birdsong said if the child does not get out of bed at once or "dallies" over his dressing or meals, he "should be allowed to take a reproof from the teacher for being late."

She recommended that the parent cooperate with the teacher in arranging for such reproof by advising the teacher.

In advising that parents give less attention to tardy children, Miss Birdsong said they should be called once in the morning and then left alone, subsequently to take a rebuke from the teacher.

Children's Concerts Begin Soon at Central High

The first children's concert of the season will be held on next Saturday, October 28, at 11 a. m., at Central High School auditorium. Many thousands of youngsters are expected to attend this series of concert, at which will be explained by conductor Hans Kindler much of the music that appears on the orchestra's larger programs at Constitution Hall, as well as the uses and possibilities of the various instruments which go to make up a symphony orchestra.

This is the first season for these concerts and they have proved a tremendous success. The concerts are endorsed by the heads of the District public school system, as well as by the officers of parochial and private schools. They have been so arranged that the material played by the orchestra and explained by Dr. Kindler will fit in with regular public school classes for the year. They are given on Saturdays so as not to interfere with school work.

Miss MacKenzie Weds Mr. Berry At St. Alban's

Palms and Chrysanthemums Deck Cathedral for Ceremony.

The wedding of Miss Caroline Elizabeth MacKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. MacKenzie, to Mr. George Augustus Berry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Berry, took place yesterday afternoon at St. Alban's Church at 5 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Charles B. Warner performed the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums and lighted by tall white tapers. A program of selected music was played on the organ preceding and during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white velvet gown fashioned on simple lines, with a high neck and fitted sleeves which ended in points over her hands, there were puffed epaulettes on the shoulders. Her tulle veil was fastened with a coronet of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and maiden hair ferns.

Mrs. Donald F. MacKenzie, sister-in-law of the bride, who was matron of honor, wore a velvet gown in the new vanilla shade made with a high neck and puffed sleeves. Her matching hat had a stiff maline brim and her flowers were bronze chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Claire Hopkinson and Miss Laura Jo Deady. Their gowns were of sage-green velvet with matching hats and their flowers were bronze and yellow chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Charles Berry, jr., acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Donald MacKenzie, brother of the bride, Mr. Jack Sanderson, and Mr. William Russell.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Berry left for a motor tour through the Northern States.

The COST OF A HAIRCUT would operate a Gas REFRIGERATOR more than eight days!

A haircut is a matter-of-fact necessity with most humans. We think of a haircut as an improvement—a need—that we would not think of doing without.

Automatic refrigeration is also a need, and the expense, with a gas refrigerator, is no more noticed than the cost of your haircut. When you get right down to facts, the gas refrigerator will save enough to pay for itself, and, after that, its low operating cost will actually mean money in your pocket. Rewards to Returned Soldier
Told by the Flaming Katherine Mayo.

What the returned soldier got did not get, in this country, England, France, Germany and Italy is told by Katherine Mayo in "Soldiers, What Next?"—to be published by Houghton Mifflin next month. As the publishers cheerily put it, "No book could be more effectively charged with dynamite." Quiet-loving people had best duck for shelter; since Miss Mayo no sooner puts her head over a parapet than the bombs fly. The ruckus she started in 1927 with her book, "Mother India," sent as much dust around the world as the explosion at Krakatoa.

Stephen Leacock, Canadian professor of economics and author of a number of hilariously funny books, has just written a biography of Charles Dickens.

Desmond Holdridge lost his job as assistant curator of ethnology in the Brooklyn Museum the very day that "Pindorama," his narrative of a journey in the remote parts of South America was published by Simon Schuster. His publishers did not refrain from mentioning that Mr. Holdridge's "conception of the duties of an ethnologist in the field" led him to observe and report a number of native customs which apparently disturb certain of the more conventional scientists.

Jonathan is one of those brilliant, lovable, irresponsible newspaper reporters, still ambitious to write a novel, totally adoring his daughter Ann. After her school days, her life with this nomadic father is one of self-sacrifice, Elsie-Dynamite-ish joy, unalloyed save for a deep-seated yearning for a home in which to place the rosewood sofa. Then Ann meets Sandy and Jonathan meets the mysterious siren, and their troubles begin.

Miss Larimore tells a "sweet" story. It is perfectly safe reading for a naïve 16-year-old daughter.

If October 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 to 9:30 a. m., from 3 to 3:40 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11:40 a. m., from 1:45 to 2:35 p. m. and from 10 to 10:45 p. m.

Fate will in all probability be kind to you on this date, and without striving particularly hard, a lot of good things should come your way. Friends will be particularly friendly and you will feel that life is really worth while. You will feel inclined to do a lot for other people, but do not, in a weak moment undertake to do anything that will leave you "in a hole" later on. The child born on this October 26 will be a sensible little one, quick to follow the advice of his parents and one not easily tempted or led into wrong-doing. He will take a serious interest in his studies and will do his best work in the field of languages. Travel will prove broadening to this little one. Do not keep him too much at home, but encourage him to mix with other children.

If October 26 is your birthday, you are not the type to rely on others for help. You hate to find yourself in a hole, and if there is anything that punctures your pride, it is having to admit that you are in the wrong and having to turn to others for help. You will in time learn that the policy of stubbornly going ahead is not a wise one in the long run. You make friends easily, and you must come to see that doing things for others and having things done for you is simply cooperation in a sense. We must give and take all through life. You like to look upon yourself as an individual and quite self-sufficient, absolutely free and under no obligation to any one.

Born on October 26, you like to take gambles or risks in business. When things go against you, you do not whine and complain, but are spurred on to greater activity and endeavor. Once you have made up your mind that you want to go out and get it, this is true also in regard to your selection of a mate. Although you are a rather cold person, and this applies to both sexes, you will not be happy unless you can find a mate who will give you a warm and enduring love. Once you have found the person you love in your rather unemotional way, you carefully lay your plans for conquest. You leave no stone unturned, then patiently wait to win.

Opening Notrump Bids.

The opening bid of one no-trump is unquestionably the most undesirable call that may be made and yet it is an essential bid in Contract. Hands containing about 3 honor-tricks divided in three suits justify an opening bid of one no-trump, not vulnerable, but when vulnerable an opening no-trump bid discloses a hand with a minimum of 4 honor-tricks. In both cases, whether vulnerable or not vulnerable, an opening no-trump bid implies that the hand contains no biddable suit and strongly infers that it does not even have a shaded biddable suit which could be shown in preference. This explaining why the opening no-trump bid is considered contract's weakest opening call. The very fact that a no-trump bid has been made implies in itself, unfavorable distribution—that is, the probability that great difficulty will be experienced in developing low cards as trick winners. The bid should be used rarely. For instance, in the following distribution, any nonbiddable four-card-major suit headed by Ace-Ten, King-Ten or Queen-Knave should be shown in preference to one no-trump. Equally, when vulnerable, with an honor holding sufficient to justify an opening suit bid, but less than the 4 honor-tricks necessary to justify the no-trump opening, a shaded suit should be bid in preference.

Holding:
Spades A 8 5 4
Hearts 6
Diamonds K Q 5 4
Clubs K J 3 2

bid one diamond, when not vulnerable, in preference to one no-trump, although the hand measures up in honor strength to the minimum requirements for a non-vulnerable no-trump bid. If vulnerable, however, this hand should be passed. With such hands as:

Spades A Q 6
Hearts A Q 4
Diamonds K 10 9 8
Clubs 7 6 3

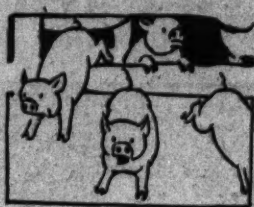

bid one diamond if vulnerable, because the hand is too strong to be passed; one no-trump might safely be ventured if not vulnerable. In other days, before the modern theory of cards had been developed, a no-trump bid was considered the strongest opening bid in auction and in its predecessor, the game of bridge whist. However, with the development of modern principles of bidding and play applied to the newer and more exacting game of contract, players quickly learned that no-trump bids on hands which offered a possible suit declaration were losing ventures and invited tremendous penalties at the bridge table, whether vulnerable or not, whenever the maker of such a bid was confronted with a trickless Dummy.

The basic objection to the Opening no-trump bid is that, in the first place, it fails to give information as to one of the most important features of any hand—namely, its distribution. A second objection is that any response partner may make to an Opening bid of no-trump is already at the range of two, which may quite conceivably be far too high.

However, undesirable as Opening no-trump bids undoubtedly are, there are hands which do not offer a reasonable alternative bid, and those with the necessary honor strength must be opened with a bid of one no-trump. It therefore clearly follows that an Opening bid of one no-trump generally denies a biddable suit in the hand and that such

"We even use the squeak—that goes into the scrapple."

You can get scrapple with a squeak for 15 and 20 cents a pound, pork roll, 30 cents, genuine salami for 50 cents a pound, pork sausage for 22 cents a pound. Bacon, un-sliced, 15 cents a pound, sliced, 25 cents. Plate beef is 8 cents a pound, beef kidney, 15 cents.

Salaries have been cut, but the much-discussed depression has reduced the cost of living sometimes more than the pay check. The Marketer has made a recent survey of the meat market, comparing October, 1929 (before the crash) with October, 1933.

Admiral Byrd Lonely For Dead Pal, Igloo

Rear Admiral Richard Byrd, on his second South Pole exploration, confessed to a friend of his in the Navy the other day, that something will be lacking in the trip now Igloo, his faithful pal, is dead.

Igloo enjoyed the coldest weather almost as much as the admiral. And as for penguins, they had an unhappy time of it when Igloo was "on liberty."

All the hardships of the expedition did not hamper Igloo. He was the pet of the camp and knew it. Privileged to follow the admiral wherever he went, the only time he was made to stay at home was when Rear Admiral Byrd and his companions flew over the South Pole.

But the luxuries and soft life of civilization were too much for Igloo. Shortly after Rear Admiral Byrd returned to the United States Igloo died, despite all that medical science could do in the effort to save his life.

King Henry VIII Comes to Life at Keith's—Earle's New Mistress of Ceremonies

Laughton Does His Best Work As Tudor King

English Cast in Support; Audrey Seiber Named to Earle Post.

"THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII," London film production for United Artists, is the story of Arthur, Prince of Wales, and his love life, as told by Charles Laughton, who plays the part of the king. The film is a masterpiece of English cast in support; Audrey Seiber, named to Earle Post.

Those who look to "The Private Life of Henry VIII" for an accurate reflection of the events of major political and historical importance during the reign of the Tudor king have not paid due heed to the title. It is the "private life" of Henry VIII that is here examined—the incidents in his marital adventures and domestic behavior that occurred behind the moated walls of his castle and were known to few besides himself and his retainers. It is a much gay and more amusing recital, so that it would have been the action hedged about by the pomp and circumstance of the formal court.

The life of King Henry VIII, when he was not on display before the world, was such as to afford Charles Laughton, foremost of the contemporary English actors of the younger school, the opportunity for one of his lushest and most realistic performances before the cameras. Bearing a remarkable resemblance to the Holbein portraits, Laughton finds it easy to imbue the much-married monarch with attributes of mind and body that seem peculiarly indigenous to the character by reason of his own physical fitness for the part. He plays the role with a swag. He plays it, furthermore, with wide spread feet, bumptious good nature and the apoplectic fervor of a coarse and overfed gourmand.

Versatile Portrayal. With each of his many wives—and we do not meet them all in the picture—he adopts a different mien, now, beautiful, now vainly proud of his athletic prowess, now petulant and again an austere ruler, every inch a king. It is, needless to say, a variegated and versatile depiction of a colorful and frequently contradictory character.

This, however, is only the highlight of a production that rivals the most impressive ever made in the magnitude and brilliance of its pageantry. There is, to be sure, a strong note of satire and a faint burlesque of burlesque in the movement and treatment of the story, but these are backgrounded against a panorama of the times that errs, if at all, on the side of underemphasis of a universal and voluptuous vulgarity.

There was not too much delicacy of feeling, speech or action in the days of this roving tale of a proud king's anxiety for a male heir and indifference to the sacrifices necessary to insure a continuance of the line of the kingdom over which it might rule. There is not too much reflected in this filming of the story, but there is more than a strict adherence to actuality might warrant.

Wives All Beautiful. Henry VIII, at least, might plead some extenuation for his frailties in the ravishing beauty of the wives, past, present and prospective, with which he is surrounded on the silver sheet. They make no such eager effort to impress character upon the spectator as Cornelia Otis Skinner did in her sketches of "The Wives of Henry VIII," but they form a gorgeous incentive for all of their king's indiscretions.

Rinnie Barnes, as Kathryn Howard, fares perhaps a little better than the rest in the matter of sustained opportunity, but Rinnie's character shares with her distinguished husband—husband both on the screen and off, incidentally—the comedy honors of the picture by dividing with him the droll humor of the wedding night that was devoted to a game of cards, in which the king came out a willing and intensely amusing second best. Miss Lancheater's Ann of Cleves is one of the film's priceless assets.

Extraordinary Scenes. But the film seems peculiarly rich in assets and surprisingly bereft of liabilities. The entire roster of the picture's personnel deserves unstinted praise for the creation and maintenance of an atmosphere of authenticity in every ramification of the story's diverse interests. Especially characteristic of the time and place are the scenes depicting briefly the bustling activity in the royal kitchen, the feast days—scenes that beggar description in their abundance of comestibles and perfection of detail.

The hunting scenes, with their fleeting glimpses of falconry—interrupted by courier bearing tidings to the king of the birth of his son—are others that imprint themselves upon memory, not to mention the banquet scenes, abundantly and magnificently uncouth without ever being seriously obnoxious. But it is the combination of all these divergent elements into a smoothly rounded, faultlessly articulated mosaic of life in a picturesque and interesting era in the world's history that makes "The Private Life of Henry VIII" a contribution to the meager list of the year's best pictures that no dis-

New Mistress of Ceremonies.

After seemingly endless auditions, consuming a period of several weeks, John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in this territory, before leaving the Capital for New York yesterday announced that Audrey Seiber, a Washingtonian residing with her mother, Mrs. Grace Seiber, at 3701 Massachusetts avenue, has been definitely decided upon as the new mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater immediately to succeed Jessie Barris, whose eight-week engagement ends tonight, and to take the place occupied for three years by Maxine Doyle, now a contract film player in Hollywood.

General Manager Payette and Guy Wonders, in charge of booking the stage bills at the Earle, estimate that in all they have given auditions to 908 girls in the past few weeks, both here and in New York.

Has Been On Stage.

Miss Seiber is described as a winsome, brown-haired type, is 18 years of age, and has had experience in amateur theatricals and as a dancer since she was 4. Many will recall her as a participant in numerous benefit readings and Young Men's Society. She also appeared as a child in "Stolen Fruit," with Ann Harding at the Belasco, and played a minor role in "Able's Irish Rose," during its extended Washington engagement.

Miss Seiber was born in Washington and received her education at John Eaton, Hyde and Fillmore Grade Schools and Western High. She is 5 feet 4 inches in height, weighs 105 pounds, and has brown hair and gray-green eyes. Her hobbies are swimming, reading and cooking. She will make her debut on the Earle stage tomorrow.

And so will the following new programs in the downtown, first-run motion-picture houses make their debuts, save only at the Metropolitan, where "The Kennel Murder Case" is being held a second week, and at the Palace, where Mae West's "I'm No Angel" begins its run with a midnight preview to-night.

Rowdy Comedy With Mae West Opens Tonight. Mae West invites the Capital to "come up and see her" when she spreads her wings in the eagerly awaited "I'm No Angel," which Loew's Palace presents as a special preview showing at midnight to-night.

From every standpoint—story, star performance, songs and sage quips—"I'm No Angel" is said to excel Mae West's first record-smashing starring venture, "She Done Him Wrong."

This tantalizing film has everything that those whom the West curves and wisecracks have captivated anticipate in this sequel to the unprecedentedly successful "She Done Him Wrong."

"I'm No Angel" is a modern yarn, skillfully presenting her as Tira, a $1,000,000 circus beauty, singer and dancer. Wholly picturesque, she becomes a lion tamer, has nerve enough to place her head in the lion's mouth and thus becomes the sensation of a big New York circus. Her supporting cast is headed by Cary Grant as her tall, dark and handsome man. Kent Taylor, Edward Arnold, Gregory Ratoff, Dorothy Peterson, Ralf Harolde and Russell Hopton also have important parts in this production.

Hilarious Film At Rialto Has Slim and Zasu

Without any shadow of doubt, and with no reservations and critical acclaim, to declare it, "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby" is the greatest and funniest screen comedy that Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts have ever made.

That is why the Rialto Theater, for the new week beginning on Saturday, will be laughter headquarters for the District of Columbia. "Love, Honor and Oh, Baby" opens Saturday at the Ninth street playhouse and as directed by Eddie Buzzell the film has a supporting cast that includes Lucille Gleason, Verree Teasdale, Henry Kolker, Donald Meek and George Barbier. The screen production is an adaptation of "Oh, Promise Me," by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson. In completing its program the Rialto supplements this hilarious comedy with several screen novelties and the latest edition of Universal News, with Graham McNamee as the talking reporter.

An Ace Bill Is Announced for Week at Earle

Barbara Stanwyck and Morton Downey will share honors at Warner Bros. Earle Theater for the week starting tomorrow. Miss Stanwyck will be seen on the screen in "Ever in My Heart," her latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros., and Morton Downey will headline the stage bill, in person, with a new group of love songs and ballads. "Ever in My Heart" is said to be a picture that calls for the expression of the deepest and most powerful emotions Miss Stanwyck has ever been called upon to portray. The story combines rare and beautiful romance with pulsating dramatic action and tender pathos.

Miss Stanwyck is supported by an exceptionally strong supporting cast, with Otto Kruger, one of the greatest players of the legitimate stage, playing the leading masculine role. Other players are Ralph Bellamy, Ruth Donnelly, Laura Hope Crews, Frank Albertson, Clara Blandick and Harry Beresford.

The stage portion of the program is alone worth the price of admission, with Morton Downey, radio's greatest personality, heading the bill. Downey returns by demand of Earle patrons, direct from a sensational European tour. He presents a program of sentimental love songs and tender ballads rendered in his own golden-voiced manner. Other acts will be Annie, Judy and Zeke, assisted by Brother Pete, four youths from the footlights, in one of vaudeville's unique hill-billy offerings; Frank Hunter and Mae Percival in a character dialect skit, and Don Lee and Trudina, continental dance favorites.

News Chasers Enjoy Innings

Daring, courageous and ever-alert news cameramen have their inning, and a mighty exciting one, in "Headline Shooter," coming tomorrow to Loew's Columbia Theater. Frances Dee and William Gargan have the featured roles in this heart-throbbing drama of the men who bring news thrills to the screen.

Others in this capable cast are Ralph Bellamy, Jack La Rue, Wallace Ford, Gregory Ratoff, Franklin Pangborn, Dorothy Burgess and the noted humorist, Robert Benchley. Ted Lewis and Comedy at Fox

Ted Lewis, world-famous "highly trained tragedian of jazz" and his band, in person, and the greatest all-comedy cast supporting Jack (Baron Munchausen) Pearl in his initial screen howl, "Meet the Baron," are the diverting fare awaiting Loew's Fox patrons tomorrow.

The stage, screen and more recently radio have presented for a quarter of a century the appealing melodies and musical nonsense of Ted Lewis and his clowns. Today this bandman is more popular than ever. Appearing with Lewis and his band in specialties will be the Dixie Four, Charles "Snowball" Whittier, Carroll and Shalita, Esther Plessman, Doris Deane, Mildred Caye, Paul White and Ted Lewis, Jr.

Those tall tales, humorous anecdotes and hilarious antics of radio's celebrated Baron Munchausen gain considerable animation on the screen when Jack Pearl makes his screen debut in "Meet the Baron." Pearl, whose "Vas you dere, Sharlie?" is as famed as Mae West's "Come up and see me," is described as a riot in this madcap Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. The cast of funsters includes Jimmy (Schmossola) Durante, Zasu Pitts, Edna May Oliver, Ted Healy and his stooges, and the eye-filling M-G-M girls. "Sharlie" in this laugh-fest is portrayed by Ben Bard. Short subjects, news and a comedy round out this Fox program.

Pennsylvania Producers to Offer Plans Here.

Representative Crosby, of Pennsylvania, said last night that producers from widespread sections were en route here to develop a national milk marketing agreement as a substitute for milk codes.

He added that the agreement, abolishing the base and supply system, would be offered to the Department of Agriculture in place of those now in effect. Crosby said these had resulted in higher prices to consumers, little benefit to producers, and general dissatisfaction.

"Independent producers and organizations in Chicago, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington, Maryland and Virginia support our plan," said Crosby.

Besides abolishing the base and supply system, Crosby proposed production control according to average annual production per herd; Federal readjustment of milk and dairy products standards; Federal health inspection by Federal personnel in all areas; minimum price to producer of 4 cents a quart with regional variations; maximum price to consumers of 8 cents per quart; emergency relief milk at 6 cents per quart for relief of need.

Bomb Damages Gore's Home

Puerto Rico Governor Also Reveals Poison Plot Letter.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 25 (AP).—Gov. Robert H. Gore disclosed today that a bomb explosion had damaged his summer residence at Jajome Alto last Sunday night shortly after he and Col. E. Francis Riggs, insular police chief, had left for San Juan.

Another bomb was placed outside the governor's office window Monday during disturbances at the University of Puerto Rico growing out of a student strike.

Gore also told of receiving an anonymous letter warning of a plot to poison himself and his family.

The student strike was called in connection with the appointment of Rafael Alonzo, a Socialist, as a university trustee. An alumni association committee conferred with Gore and asked withdrawal of Alonzo. The governor refused, but suggested that if students would return, he would appoint six "outstanding citizens" to consider charges of "nonqualification" made against the trustee.

These had $31,952,000 in frozen and $2,719,000 in unrestricted deposits.

'Love Laughs'

Cupid Finds Way Even With 50 Cents Lacking.

The Pas, Manitoba, Oct. 25 (AP).—Fifty cents stood between Jim Buck and Sophia Cook, Indians of the Big Eddy Reserve, and wedding bells—but love found a way.

They learned the official matrimonial overhead was $2.50—50 cents more than their combined resources—and each went in search of it.

Miss Cook eventually borrowed from J. Kerr, fur buyer. The wedding was solemnized, and the bride today is making moccasins to clean up the liabilities.

COLORADO BILL they call him; and there are those who say he used to be one tough guy. But no more. Elder Lightfoot Michaux's broadcasting has made a God-fearing man of him, a good man, a contributor to the Children's Hospital fund.

In a letter informing the elder yesterday that he was sending along $5 to help keep the children warm this winter, he also wrote of services he's conducting in Lorton Reformatory at which, sometimes, as many as 40 of his fellow prisoners worship.

dency to soothe before-breakfast tempers.

Possibly it was that Larry Elliott and Harold Gray, really very able young men, were too cheerful. There's nothing like cheerfulness to ruin a whole day, particularly microphone cheerfulness.

John Saib will be back at the organ with Trout to play for the people who want to hear music in the morning what they want to hear.

Trout's efforts with Wilkins shows will be discontinued.

Former Michigan All-American Quarterback Benny Friedman's broadcasting of the Columbia-Princeton game last week has drawn enough favorable comment for us to hope the minds will not be long in letting football men in on game descriptions. His lack of concern for what the radio men understand to be color-crowds cheer leaders, bands—was positively heretical. Football men follow the ball. The fans around the loudspeaker appreciate their telling them where it is and how it got there.

Plans for Navy Day broadcasting tomorrow now have reached the stage where it seems reasonably safe to say something pretty definite about them.

WMAL comes back at C. B. S. for all the fancy broadcasting it is arranging for the Macon by fixing to show how the Navy keeps in touch with its battleships. Following a speech by Assistant Secretary Henry Roosevelt, WMAL will tune in on the commander of the Wyoming, communicating in code from Cuba to headquarters here. Similarly, the Macon over San Francisco, the Pacific Fleet flagship Pennsylvania off the California coast and the Asiatic Fleet at Shanghai will be picked up. All messages will be decoded and read for convenience of listeners who want to know what everyone has been communicating about. The WMAL broadcast will begin at 11:30 p. m., with the Marine Band playing. WRC probably will confine its observance of the day to radioing speeches by Rear Admirals Wat T. Cluvelius and William H. Standley from 4:30 to 5 p. m. A local commercial program is expected to keep Charles Francis Coe's "A Treaty Navy, Fully Manned," at 6:45 p. m., off Capital Airlines.

WJVS is taking another Standley talk, "Report to American People on Its Navy," tonight at 10:45 o'clock. Columbia would have broadcast the admiral tomorrow night also despite the fact he's supposed to be out in Chicago talking for N. B. C., had not the Navy Department put its foot down, saying twice on the air in two days is too much for one admiral. Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, Aeronautics Bureau chief, was picked for Navy Day speaking tomorrow night at 11 o'clock.

After the King speech, Columbia will hop across the country to a microphone aboard the Macon to describe air "defense" of San Francisco. Columbia hopes to have radioed previously for a half hour from the airship as it salutes the fleet in Los Angeles Harbor, beginning at 2:30 p. m.

The N. B. C. program schedule makers decided at the last minute to air Milo Reno, President of the Farmers' Holiday Association, today. Reno will tell the reason for the farm strike through WMAL, at 1:30 p. m. "March of Time" tomorrow night includes Russia, Gold and Daladier.

Heywood Brown, George Gershwin, Walter Winchell and Deems Taylor are Valle masters of ceremony at 8 p. m. tonight, WRC. WMAL's Djer-Kiss Recital shifts from Wednesday to Thursday, effective tonight still on 7:30 spot.

the Damroch Music Appreciation hour turns to medieval legend music tomorrow. Rochester Philharmonic is on N. B. C. at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Mercury's new editor, Menckens Successor Henry Hazlitt, has an N. B. C. microphone for 15 minutes starting at 4:15 this afternoon.

U. S. Pays Jobless Teachers Operating Nursery School

Work relief for unemployed school teachers and others needed to conduct nursery schools under the control of the public school systems will be financed by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, it was announced yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator.

Mr. Hopkins interpreted rules and regulations of the administration to provide this work relief when it was brought to his attention that boys and girls of preschool age in the homes of needy parents are suffering from unemployment conditions.

Administration funds will be provided to pay teachers and others who will organize and conduct nursery schools and to defray expenses of the schools.

State relief administrators were notified by Mr. Hopkins that plans for organizing, locating and supervising the nursery schools shall be subject to approval of local relief authorities.

Food supplies may be provided under Mr. Hopkins' authorization of October 4, relating to the child-feeding program.

One of Rebel Leaders In Siam Revolt Slain

Bangkok, Siam, Oct. 25 (AP).—Government forces predicted early success today for their efforts to quell a 13-day revolt after a rebel leader had been killed.

Phya Sri Siddhi Songgram, aid of Prince Bovar-Dej, commander of the insurgents, was slain by a sergeant after a stiff fight. Government troops subsequently claimed to be holding their own against the rebels.

Stocks Extend Advances on New Gold Plan

Heavier Gains Cut Down by Profit-Taking; Sales, 2,880,700 Shares.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—Stocks and commodities, particularly grains, extended their advances in broad and active trading today, as the Government initiated its new gold-buying plan. Extreme gains of the speculative markets were somewhat reduced by profit-taking, but stocks finished generally fractions to 5 points higher.

Some of the more inflationary minded participants may have been disappointed because the T. P. C. price for gold was 27 cents above London; a wider spread had been anticipated in certain quarters yesterday, as was evident from Tuesday's run on the dollar by international exchanges.

Dollar Changes Narrow. Today dollar fluctuations were narrower, though European gold currencies maintained higher levels during market hours.

Gold-mining stocks ran into profit taking, which kept them within relatively narrow limits. They were lively support for other industrial, and it was apparent that many traders, large and small, were still anxious to hedge against possible inflationary outgrowths of Washington's new plan for raising prices.

Steel, chemical, motor and oil equities did well. Utilities were rather so-so and rails, after an early run-up, subsided. Petroleum shares stood out probably because of prospective production curtailment.

U. S. Steel Strong. U. S. Steel was strong, up nearly 2, while the preferred rose almost 5. American Telephone, apparently encountering a favorable technical position, ran up smartly and was more than 3 points higher at the close. General Motors had partly discounted its favorable earnings statement, being fractionally improved on the day.

Allied Chemical and Case were up about 5. Montgomery Ward, Pennsylvania, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Atlantic Refining, Standard Oil of California, Western Union, American Smelting, Du Pont, McClellan, Allis-Chalmers, American General Electric, Standard Brands, Westinghouse and Union Carbide, 1 to nearly 3. Transactions increased to 2,880,700 shares.

The moderate premium paid by the Government over the London market gold price was regarded in some quarters as evidence that too great a stimulant for production was not considered desirable; the actual price fitted rather closely with the more conservative guesses heard yesterday.

Debiture Method Studied.

Financial circles were much interested in the debenture method of payment for gold purchased, particularly with respect to whether this method would be redemptible at the Federal Reserve bank.

Midweek trade reports still emphasized the sluggishness of industrial. Iron Age, forecasting its own estimate of steel production in favor of that by the Steel Institute, stressed the expansion of stocks on hand and said some consumers had enough material to last them through the fourth quarter unless their own operations pick up.

Third quarter earnings made generally good reading. Most corporations did better than a year ago and most of them in the second quarter. General Motors' report, while reflecting the usual lapse incident to passage of the seasonal peak, was in striking contrast to a year ago.

G. E. Company Adds 7,600 to Plant's Pay Roll

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP)—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., in a statement released to stockholders today, disclosed that the company has added some 7,600 employees to its pay roll since March 1, last, with a consequent increase in annual wages and salaries of approximately $17,000,000.

At the same time, President Swope reported new business booked during the first nine months of the year had shown a steady rise and that, for the first time since 1929, orders have exceeded those for a like period of the previous year. For the first time in three years, he added, orders for the third quarter totaled more than the sales billed in the same period.

Mr. Swope said the company began operating under the electrical manufacturers' code of the N.R.A. as to hours of employment and wages a week before the code went into effect on August 15. Few changes were necessary, he explained, for the maximum work-week has been only 40 hours since May, 1931, and there were but few employees whose pay was at a lower rate than that prescribed by the code.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—The recent improvement witnessed in commodity prices brought a rise of 1 cent in the Dun & Bradstreet food index which on October 24 stood at $1.89. The previous week had shown a drop of 4 cents.

American Tobacco Co. today declared regular quarterly dividends of $1 each on the common and common "B" stocks, payable December 1 to holders of record November 10.

Bristol-Myers Co. today declared its first dividend since its reestablishment as an independent unit following segregation from Drug Inc. The distribution, 50 cents a share payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 15, is at the rate previously paid by the company. Drug Inc. An extra of 10 cents was also voted.

Arrangements have been made for the sale of a stock exchange membership at $10,000, a decrease of $5,000 from the last sale.

France and Our New Policy Cabinet Resignation Offset in Exchange Market by Our Action

By Ralph West Robey.

It would be difficult to have a more significant commentary on our newly adopted monetary policy than that provided by the fall of the French government. This is a result of the two events occurring so closely together from the point of view of time that their relative significance was appraised simultaneously in the foreign exchange market. The conclusion was unfavorable to the United States. The French cabinet, in general terms, that the fall of the French government has been decided as involving less danger to one's savings than the adoption of our new monetary policy.

To appreciate the significance of this decision it is necessary only to recall that the resignation of the French cabinet was directly the result of a bad financial situation in that country. France is faced with a deficit in its national budget of approximately $335,000,000. While this is substantially less than our deficit for the first four months of this fiscal year—and we still are insisting that our budget is balanced—M. Daladier's position is not so favorable. The financial stability of his country and consequently that of the budget must be maintained.

Held Inflation Only Alternative To Balancing Budget. He maintained, in fact, that the only possible alternative to balancing the budget is inflation. Further, that he and his government would fight against inflation just as they would fight against an invasion of French soil by a foreign foe. Accordingly, upon the meeting of the chamber of deputies he offered a program of economies and additional taxation that would cover the needed $335,000,000. It was upon this program that his government was swept out of power. In the face of such a development the normal financial action of those with funds in France is to shift their balances to some other country. This is especially true of foreigners with deposits in France, of which there are a great many at present, but it also applies to some extent to Frenchmen themselves in so far as they have readily movable funds. Such shifting, of course, causes an increase in the demand for the currencies of the countries offering a safer refuge for funds and the value of these currencies advances, or, conversely, the price of francs falls.

Our New Monetary Policy Affected Offsetting Force.

In the present case, however, there was an offsetting factor. This was the adoption of our new monetary policy, for it started a flow of capital—in the opposite direction. This was because, since this policy pledges a course of action designed to make the dollar worth less—those with free balances in this country tended to shift them to some other place where there appears to be less danger.

The effect of this, obviously, was to drive the dollar down. With the adoption of our new monetary policy and the resignation of the French cabinet coming at virtually the same time, therefore, the dollar was being pulled in both directions. On the one side it was being forced up through funds moving out of France and on the other side it was being forced down through funds moving out of this country. Of these two factors, the latter—the desire to get funds out of this country—proved stronger. In consequence the dollar fell in the foreign exchange market in terms of francs. In other words, the value of the franc as measured by amounts was that, regardless of the dire predictions of the M. Daladier, France still offered advantages as a refuge for savings.

Decline of Dollar.

The decline of the American dollar in foreign exchange markets again brought substantial gains in obligations of the gold standard countries and various secondary corporate maturities moved up in sympathy with stocks.

90,000 May Work On State Highways

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP)—James T. Voshell, engineer for the Chicago district of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, today forecast that at least 90,000 men would be put to work by next spring on highway projects financed by the Federal Government in the district.

The States in the district are Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois. He said allotments for the projects totaled $47,602,199.

Voshell gave the following estimates:

Michigan $1,517,770
Indiana $1,517,770

Curb's Prices Continue Rise Under Buying

Broader Advance Takes in Oils; Sales Drop to 343,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—The advance was continued on the curb exchange today and broadened to include oils and specialties along with the metals. Utilities recorded moderate gains while alcohols heated. Activity increased on the buying movement and slowed down noticeably on minor sales.

Oils rose prominently around midday advances of 4 or more points being recorded by Humble Oil and Standard Oil of Ohio.

Various other issues making similar gains included Dow Chemical, Pan-American Airways, Parker Rust Proof and Great Atlantic & Pacific.

Mining shares were featured by advances of around 2 points in Newmont mining and New Jersey zinc. Lake Shore mines dropped back after getting up more than a point.

Electric Bond & Share added a major fraction while a point or more was acquired in inactive dealings by Commonwealth Edison, American Light & Traction and Columbia Gas & Electric preferred.

Transports approximated 345,000 shares compared with 352,000 for the previous session.

Commodity Dollar Is Seen As Next Step

Financial Experts Divided in Opinions on Plans for U. S. Money.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—What sort of a dollar are we headed for? That's a question which financiers, bankers and economists are asking avidly.

The President's reiteration Sunday night that when the price level is restored, "we shall seek to establish and maintain a dollar which will not change in its purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation," was widely interpreted as a declaration for the so-called commodity dollar.

No administration spokesman, however, has yet said whether the dollar will be pegged to gold, and the impression prevails that detailed plans to stabilize the purchasing power of the dollar, once it has been returned to presumably the level of 1928, have not been definitely formulated.

Variable Content Favored.

Prof. George F. Warren, one of the President's economic advisers, favors a dollar of variable gold content. He holds that the value of gold varies, causing fluctuations in the value of the dollar and in consequence, in the commodity price level, which might be overcome by altering the gold in the dollar.

Many other economists assert that gold is but one of many factors affecting the price level, that sharp expansion and contraction of credit may have an even greater effect on the price level, and that the value of gold varies, causing fluctuations in the value of the dollar and in consequence, in the commodity price level, which might be overcome by altering the gold in the dollar.

The theory has been advanced that should the volume of credit be rigidly controlled to allow for no more than the annual long-term production increase of about 4 per cent, financial crises and wide fluctuations in prices might be avoided.

Wheat Jumps 3 1-2 Cents on Gold Action

Highest Prices Trimmed
by Profit-Taking; All Grains Advance.

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Buoyantly responding to upturns in gold prices at Washington as fixed according to President Roosevelt's latest monetary program, grain values went skyward anew today.

Highest prices of the day in wheat showed an overnight gain of 4½ cents a bushel, but profit taking reduced this by a moderate extent at the last.

Big margins demanded for speculative transactions tended to keep the general public from sharing as much in the market as the steep upturns of prices would ordinarily imply, and there was talk, too, that the day's volume of business was curtailed by the fact that concentrated holdings in strong hands had been recently acquired at far lower prices.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.
Wheat closed unsettled, 2½ to 3½ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, 2 to 2½ up; oats, 1¾ to 2½ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 45 cents.

From the outset, bulls were in the saddle, and all grains pushed higher, with top quotations reached by wheat shortly before the finish. Buying came chiefly from Eastern sources, and a notable feature throughout the day was

Corn and other grains borrowed most of their strength from wheat action. Announcement of a processing tax on corn was said to have affected cash interests rather than futures.

Provisions rose with hog values and with grains.

Graf Zeppelin Leaves Akron For Chicago

Takes 24 Passengers on Moonlit Sky Ride to World's Fair.

Akron, Oct. 25 (AP).—Soaring majestically upward, the veteran sky voyager Graf Zeppelin took off at 11:55 p. m. for the Chicago World's Fair after a night and day stop-over here on the long journey from Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Weather conditions were ideal, and the silvery cigar-shaped dirigible gleamed in the clear cold moonlight as it pointed its nose toward Chicago.

Twenty-four passengers are aboard.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the commander, said he planned to loaf along at half speed throughout the night and arrive over Chicago about 9 tomorrow morning.

The Graf will make a leisurely flight to Glenview Airport near Chicago, arriving probably at 7:30 a. m., and remaining for 30 minutes.

Will Visit Fair.

The commander and some of his passengers will disembark at Glenview. Other passengers will be taken aboard and the Graf will return to her Akron hangar, whence she will take off Saturday for Seville, Spain, and Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Dr. Eckener will spend tomorrow at the exposition, going to the fair with Hans Luther, the German Ambassador. He will take lunch with Rufus C. Dawes, the banker, and visit his friend, Karl Eitel, Chicago hotel man. He will rejoin the Graf at Akron, traveling by train.

Two hundred United States Army men from Camp Whittier, at the Century of Progress, will aid experienced ground crew bosses in landing and holding the Graf during her short stop at Glenview.

Capital Officials Aboard.

The passenger list for the Chicago journey included Representative Dow Harter, of Akron; Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Washington; Eugene L. Vidal, director, Aeronautical Branch, Department of Commerce; William Howes, Second Assistant Postmaster General; Dr. George W. Lewis, director of research, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; and Maj. J. Carroll Cone, chief of the Air Regulations Division, Aeronautics Branch, Department of Commerce.

Permanent Barracks for U. S. Crews Planned.

One hundred and nineteen men, four officers and a dog arrived yesterday at Beltsville, Md., to establish Prince Georges County's second Civilian Conservation Corps Camp.

The men, accompanied by Fields, the camp mascot, located on the Government Experimental Farm. A brick building, formerly the National Training School for Girls, will be used as headquarters. Formerly at Oakland, Md., in Garrett County, the camp was moved because of cold weather. Permanent barracks will be built at Beltsville.

The men will undertake a landscape improvement project, designed to make the land tract a model Bureau of Animal Husbandry farm.

$1,055,237 Given For 23 Projects

Allotments Give $62,000 to Anne Arundel County.

Non-Federal allotments to 23 projects in widely scattered States totaling $1,055,237, were announced yesterday by the Public Works Administration, including a loan and grant of $62,000 to Anne Arundel County, Md.

The advance to Anne Arundel County is to be used for construction of outfall and lateral sewers and house connections for sewage disposal. Thirty per cent of the cost of labor and material, approximately $47,000, is a grant.

The balance is a loan secured by 4 per cent general obligation bonds. Work can start in one month and be completed in 90 days, giving employment to 100 men during construction, it was stated.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.
Encephalitis Not Due to Smoke.

A. B. suggests that the epidemic of encephalitis in St. Louis was caused by breathing the smoke-polluted air of the Union Station. Her work has made it necessary for her to go through that section 25 times recently. She writes: "As soon as the train pulls into the station I have the most distressing feeling from that dreadful odor of cold smoke from the engine. The air is cold, clammy and smoky. I am well and strong, but breathing that air makes me gasp for breath and act like an asthmatic. I scarcely have energy enough to attend to my baggage and get out of the station into the fresh air."

The correspondent is wrong in her conclusions. The epidemic of encephalitis started in the country and spread to the city. Prior to the outbreak in St. Louis County it was fairly prevalent in several adjoining States, and the people in the small towns and rural districts had their share of it. Nowhere has it been associated with exposure to smoke. Up to date, no certain information is in hand as to what causes the disease, but nothing suggests the cause to be smoke.

While the air of the station does not cause encephalitis, nor does it cause all of A. B.'s symptoms— which by the way, are not those of encephalitis—it is often unpleasant and, in some measure, unwholesome. "The station is located in something of a valley, with higher ground near by on two sides and not far away in other directions. The train shed serves further to trap air. The number of locomotives coming into, going out of, and standing in the station is large. St. Louis is near a soft coal field. This coal makes much smoke, and in this smoke there is considerable sulphur."

As the smoke comes from the stack it contains much sulphurous acid, and this is irritating to the breathing apparatus and harmful to fabrics. Some of this acid absorbs moisture and is changed to sulphuric acid, a form that is also irritating to the breathing apparatus and corrosive to metals. Certainly smoke produced in locomotives under strong draft contains unburned coal, fine dust carbon, carbonic acid and carbon monoxide. None of these is entirely wholesome. Of the group, carbon monoxide is the most harmful, but there is no very great danger of a harmful proportion of this gas in the station air.

The authorities, the citizens and the railroads are aware of the situation, but to apply a remedy is not easy. Most of the railroads would like to change to electric traction in the terminal, but the owners say the money to do this can not be found. A type of terminal engine now coming

Aged Indian Sticks to Gold; Asks All 6 Mules Can Pull

U. S. Says He Can't Have It and Wheeler Advises Nez Percés to Work.

"Many Wounds," an aged Nez Percé Indian, probably the bravest of warriors in his day, believes the Government still owes his tribe "as much gold as six mules could pull, with the gold loaded upon a heavy wagon."

Despite his claim advanced at a hearing Tuesday before a Senate committee at Lapwai, Idaho, there is no evidence in the files of the Indian Bureau at the Department of Interior that will cause Uncle Sam to hitch up any mules.

But records show that after 1855, when a treaty was made with the tribe, over $500,000 had been paid to the Nez Percés for houses, schools, sawmills, farming implements and a yearly salary for their chief. And if "Many Wounds," who also owns the handle Sam Lott, was present at the treaty, he is more than 90 now.

Officials at the Indian Bureau suggested that $500,000 probably meant six wagon loads to the Indian.

Indians don't realize that once a thing has been settled in court, nothing can be done about it," explained C. N. Willington, secretary to Commissioner Collier, head of the Indian Bureau. "Abuses of 40 years ago are living things to Indians. Year by year they present their claims."

A. C. Monahan, assistant to Commissioner Collier, who is out of town, said he was quite sure "no gold was due the Nez Percés. He recalled that Indians have a lot of belief in promises of unscrupulous ing into use will help the situation, but using this type of engine will not affect encephalitis.

Removing Tattoo.

H. G. J. writes: Is there a preparation of some kind to remove a tattoo from the arm? If so, is it very expensive?

Reply.

No. Tattoo marks can be removed, but the process is not simple, easy or cheap. The procedure is classed as an operation.

Price of Ice Advanced.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 25 (Sp.). Price of ice was back yesterday in Hagerstown where it was before the depression. Dealers announced that, effective at once, the price would be 50 cents a hundred instead of 40. A price war here several years ago resulted in ice prices being slashed.

persons who sometimes represent themselves as speaking for the Government.

Although the Nez Percés own only a tenth as much land as they did in 1855, they have received concessions, many in cash, over a period of 21 years. Their chief was allotted a house and $500 a year. Uncle Sam stipulated, however, that "annuities would be withheld from those who use ardent spirits."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee, who heard the claims at the hearing, warned the Nez Percés that they should "farm their own lands rather than lease them to whites," as it will probably be only a short time until the Government withdraws all financial support and you will have to be self-supporting."

Liberty Trades Test Investors On New Policy

One Issue Payable in Cash; Conversions Watched as Barometer.

As a barometer of the attitude of investors toward President Roosevelt's new monetary policy, Treasury officials are watching the returns of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds being exchanged for new Government securities.

The Treasury called $1,875,000,000 of the bonds, offering to exchange for them new bonds or to pay cash for them. These Liberties bear interest at 4 1/2 per cent. The new bonds, dated November 1, will pay 4 1/4 per cent the first year and 3 1/2 per cent thereafter. They will run 12 years.

Treasury officials announced last night that already $650,000,000 of Fourth Liberties have been turned in for conversion.

The Treasury statement as of October 23 showed a total of $488,415,950 and the statement for October 19 showed $356,024,850 of the bonds had been turned in. This indicates the bonds are being sent in for exchange in accelerating amounts.

The plan was looked upon as offering holders of Liberty bonds a security with liberal income for this type of investment.

What may explain the slowness with which the bonds are being turned in is the fact that Fourth Liberties probably are more widely held than any other security, and many are in the hands of inexperienced investors, some of whom may not know their bonds have been called.

Market observers said the test will come within the next few days when the Treasury statement should tell whether the "commodity dollar" plan adversely affected the market for Government securities.

I keep coming back to that word "balanced" on the back of the Chesterfield package

YOU often hear the word balance—something is out of balance—top-heavy, not on an "even keel."

What you read, "Chesterfield Cigarettes are a balanced blend," means that the right amounts of the right kinds of tobacco are welded together; that is, home-grown tobaccos, the right kind, the right quantity—are blended and cross-blended with tobaccos from Turkey and Greece.

When these tobaccos are balanced one against the other, then you have a mild cigarette.

When they are in balance, then you have a better-tasting cigarette.

May we ask you to read again the statement on the back of the Chesterfield package?

May we ask you to try Chesterfield?

Bishop Ryan Consecrated Amid Pomp

High Church Dignitaries, Diplomats Attend Shrine Rites.

3,000 Crowd Into Crypt to See Catholic U. Rector Elevated.

The Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, rector of the Catholic University of America, was consecrated bishop of the titular see of Modra yesterday, as 3,000 spectators, including members of the clergy, Diplomatic Corps and representatives of educational institutions looked on with rapt attention, crowding the crypt of the National Shrine to its capacity.

Amid a hushed silence permeated by the solemn chant of a pontifical high mass, Bishop Ryan was consecrated during an impressive three-hour ceremony by the Most Rev. Joseph Chartrand, Bishop of Indianapolis, consecrating prelate, assisted by the Most Rev. Thomas E. Molloy, Bishop of Brooklyn, and the Most Rev. Joseph E. Ritter, Auxiliary Bishop of Indianapolis, as cocoonsecrators.

Thrones in the sanctuary were occupied by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, and chancellor of the university. The consecrating sermon was delivered by the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati.

Laymen Take Part. Clarence Martin, Knight of St. Gregory, attended Archbishop Curley, while George MacDonald, of New York, papal marquis, attended the apostolic delegate. The Right Rev. Edward A. Pace, vice rector of the university, was the master and other officers in the nave were members of the faculty of the university and friends and colleagues of Bishop Ryan.

The procession of bishops, non-signors, priests and other members of the clergy, with presidents of colleges and universities and superiors of religious orders, formed in the nave of the shrine and proceeded into the crypt at 9:45.

Colorful pageantry filled the shrine, with members of the hierarchy seated directly in front of the altar; the faculty of the university, in academic costumes, just behind them; the Diplomatic Corps and special guests opposite the epistle side of the main altar and the monsignors and clergy opposite the gospel side.

"To Sanctify, Rule and Teach." Following the consecration ritual Archbishop McNicholas extolled the office of Bishop as designed to sanctify, to rule and to teach.

"Religion can not be purely in personal affairs," he said. "The office of bishop is bestowed by the laying on of hands by which spiritual powers are conferred upon men. Pope Pius XI has given the mandate to confer upon the bishop the powers of responsibility and dignity. The new bishop is consecrated for the ministry of the supreme priesthood."

"The bishop is a teacher above all while the church acts as a world teacher and points out to all nations and groups what is contrary to faith and morals. There can be no code in society but the dogmatic code. A personal God exists and governs the universe and eternal rewards and punishments. What becomes of the doctrine of the Federal Constitution if rejected? What can prevent anarchy if codes are not retained?"

"During the war the church alone remained calm and called upon the world to return to sanity, concerning national prohibition, bishops have urged patience, temperance and prudence while they have fought the disregard for virtue and public modesty. They have shown themselves as wise teachers in these matters."

Pledges New Bishop Support. "Bishop Ryan inherits the ritual, dignity and respectability of his forebears. As a rector he has the unqualified support of the chancellor of the university and representatives of the Holy See."

Archbishop McNicholas mentioned that the consecrating prelate, the Most Rev. Joseph Chartrand, had been a constant associate of Bishop Ryan's throughout life.

Martin A. Leese Elected Head Of Chamber

Succeeds T. P. Littlepage; Gen. Johnson Fails to Make Speech.

Martin A. Leese last night was elected president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce at a meeting which was marked by numerous bulletins from Recovery Administrator Johnson reciting his efforts to get away from a conference for a scheduled speech before the chamber. Leese succeeds Thomas P. Littlepage.

A third telegram from Johnson's office in the Commerce Building, which said he would not be able to address the Chamber, broke up the three-hour session.

William C. Miller, president of the National Real Estate Board, was elected first vice president of the chamber, while George E. Keneipp was chosen second vice president.

Chamber directors elected last night are W. H. Collier, C. Phillips Hill, Col. U. S. Grant, 3d, Joseph P. Tumulty, Ernest E. Herrell, Thomas N. Beavers, Frank H. Edmonds, Col. Wrisley Brown, Lee D. Butler and Richard H. Hutchison.

Mother Gone

Police Join Search; Son Sobs, Husband Ill.

A young mother is missing. Her husband and 4-year-old son last night appealed to police to join friends in a city-wide search.

The young woman, Mrs. Edna Vernon, 21, disappeared from her home, 464 M street southwest, last Monday. Her husband, Raymond F. Vernon, 24, athlete, has been under care of physicians since his wife's disappearance.

Their son, Raymond, Jr., last night sobbed on the shoulder of his aunt, Mrs. Marion King.

904 Workers Added to Navy Yard Pay Roll

About 3,000 Additional to Be Placed at Rate of 250 Monthly.

Nine hundred and four persons have been hired at Washington Navy Yard since July 1, officials revealed yesterday.

A new civil service eligibility list containing more than 10,000 names has been virtually completed and will be used by the yard board in employing about 3,000 additional persons at a rate of 250 or more each month.

Last week alone 117 persons were added to the yard roster while appointments have been mailed to 184 others. While most of the new employees are residents of Washington, some are from distant States.

Funds granted by the Public Works Administration to bring the Navy to treaty limits are being used to finance the expansion program. All ordinance work such as construction of guns has been allotted to the local yard while similar establishments in other parts of the country are building ships.

Civilian personnel at the Washington yard stood at 3,500 when the program was launched July 1. Though there have been 904 jobs created, the total personnel now is only 4,414 because of retirements for age and resignations.

An ultimate increase of 3,500 persons, almost doubling the rolls, is expected. Most of the new jobs probably will last until June, 1936. New workers will include 2,800 machinists, other skilled labor and clerks.

Trial of Two In Frat House Fire Nears End

Case of Smith, Parilton, Jointly Accused, May Reach Jury Today.

Fate of H. Albert Smith and Edward J. Parilton, arrested on charges of causing a fire in the Sigma Chi fraternity house last July, is expected to be placed in the hands of a jury in District Supreme Court today.

Both defendants have testified and both have denied guilt. Smith and Parilton offered "alibi" defenses that placed them in Gunpowder Falls, Md., 82 miles from here, slightly more than one hour after the reported origin of the fire that periled the lives of sixteen members of the fraternity.

Defense testimony concluded yesterday when Parilton took the stand. He drew for the jury a picture of their automobile mishap that caused them to miss their "date." He declared neither he nor Smith had any reason to set fire to the frat house, of which he was a pledge and Smith the president.

Prosecution testimony, through Assistant United States Attorney John J. Sirica, rested yesterday. Smith took the stand then to deny the charge and he was followed by his codefendant. The case will go to the jury after rebuttal testimony by the Government and arguments today.

Hearing on Bank Receiver Put Off

Park Savings Creditors Request Substitution.

Court hearings on charges that complainants expected to cause appointment of a substitute receiver for the Park Savings Bank was postponed yesterday until November 2.

A group of creditors of the bank contend that since the bank's charter expired several years prior to its closing, the stockholders were merely partners, hence the Treasury Department, which appointed John F. Moran receiver, was not empowered by law to do so.

That function, it was claimed, was a prerogative of the court, and they are asking that Moran be removed and the court name a substitute.

Other debaters were Vincent George Penati, of the Edward Douglas White Club; Eugene Brown, of the Butler Club; and John Henry Law, of the White Club. Judges were Profs. Charles E. Roach, chairman; Lewis C. Cassidy and James A. Toomey, law faculty members.

U. S. Plans Rule of Radio, Wire Setups

Roosevelt Soon to Get Plan for Coordination of Services.

Commission to Order Considerations, Affect Efficiency Likely.

The Administration, it was disclosed last night, is considering establishment of an independent communications commission, which would exert strong Federal control over all radio, telephone and telegraph companies as part of the recovery program.

A committee, representative of the Army, Navy, Government departments and Congress, has been working on the program for several months and plans to submit its recommendations to President Roosevelt about December 1.

As tentatively determined, the commission would possess authority to order consolidations, conduct investigations, hand down decisions designed to make for communications efficiency, fix rates, allocate and transfer services and build strongly coordinated communications system which could be taken over immediately by the Government in event of National emergency.

Seek U. S. Radio Service.

One of the tasks facing the committee is the coordination of a strong Government radio service out of the present communications facilities of the Army and Navy.

At present, it was asserted, the telephone companies are encroaching upon the business of telegraph companies with teletype machines and the telegraph companies are encroaching upon the radio communications services by setting up competitive wireless stations under authority of the Federal Radio Commission.

Because of the overlapping, it was said, communications companies are in such a bad way it is necessary to establish a quasi-judicial commission, which would regulate them, just as the Interstate Commerce Commission regulates the railroads.

The I. C. C. is supposed now to exert a measure of control over the telephone companies, but its work along this line has been subordinated by rail affairs.

Roper Heads Study.

On the committee making the study are Secretary of Commerce Roper, chairman; Gen. Charles M. Salzman, former Radio commission chairman; vice chairman, Herbert L. Fettey, secretary of the Federal Radio Commission; secretary, Capt. Stanford C. Hooper, chief signal officer of the Navy; Maj. Gen. Irving J. Carr, chief signal officer of the Army; Commander E. M. Webster, chief of Coast Guard communications; Dr. James B. Stewart, of the State Department; Dr. J. H. Delinger, of the Bureau of Standards; Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee; Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee; and Dr. William Spawton, former president of the University of Texas, who drew up the transportation bill for Congress.

Any legislation to set up the commission probably would be handled by Spawton, Rayburn and Dill.

Uniform Furlough Rules Demanded

Views Given to President by Workers' Group.

Uniform furlough rules in the departments were demanded yesterday in resolutions sent to President Roosevelt by the Government Workers Council, a unit of the National Woman's Party.

The petition contained all demands of Federal workers could have been avoided by furloughing regular personnel. Some departments, the resolutions charged, refused temporary absences and insisted on dismissals.

"If furloughs were substituted for dismissals," the petition read, "the persons affected would not only retain their civil service status with its retirement privileges, but also because of experience, special qualifications and demonstrated efficiency, would be able in many cases to obtain transfers to some other branch of the Government service."

Indictment Brought In Shooting at Officer

A charge of assault with a dangerous weapon was placed yesterday against Thomas Rook, colored. He was indicted for shooting at Policeman George Nicholson when the officer went to an H street address to investigate a noise. The bullet smashed Nicholson's badge and inflicted a slight wound.

Why Orchid Is So Rare Told By Florist Using Test Tubes

Underwood & Underwood. Dr. David Lumsden, plant specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, holds a flask containing 1,500 hybrid orchid seedlings, or $10,000 worth of potential plants.

Six Years Is Usual Period From Seed to Bloom; 25 to Maturity.

A lifetime devoted to nature's rarest flower—the exquisite orchid! Such is the career of Dr. David Lumsden, United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Lumsden has one of the most famous private collections of orchids in the world at his home in Battery Park, Md., on the outskirts of Washington. Thousands of these lovely flowers lift their delicately traced and colored chalice to the sunlight that streams daily into their sun room.

The orchid, says Dr. Lumsden, is so highly bred that it is devoid of endosperm—the food, like albumen in the egg of the embryo chick, of the tiny seed as it struggles to light and life.

So the seed must be supplied with food before the plant can come into the world.

Flowers Born in Test Tubes.

"I start my orchid seed in test tubes after pollination," says Dr. Lumsden, "using agar with sugar as a medium. When developed and beginning to show leaves, the orchid slips are transplanted to pots in which a number of plants are grouped together. Here the plants continue growth in a medium of fine roots of the Oenothera fern—a species of the royal fern. Later the plants are shifted to larger pots as their needs require. I keep them at all times in a conservatory at a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. The house is occasionally watered down to keep the atmosphere buoyant, ventilation being required for orchids the same as other plants."

"The reproductive elements of the orchid are resident in the column of the plant and new plants are propagated in the orchid nursery by the application of male pollinia to female pollinia by means of an anther and a point or similarly tipped instrument."

"Pollination of the orchid in nature is accomplished by the honey bee flying from plant to plant. The great commercial value of

Inspectors Praise Anacostia's Police

Anacostia's "finest," the 62 members of Precinct Eleven police, were inspected yesterday by Maj. Ernest Brown, Superintendent of Police; Inspectors L. L. Edwards, A. J. Headley and William Stott and Capt. H. F. Clark, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

The policemen stood at attention while Maj. Brown praised them and Capt. S. G. Marks, who has charge of the precinct.

Maj. Brown and Capt. Clark said the precinct was one of the best organized they had visited.

Youth Who Shot Store Clerk Freed

Christopher Weinecke, 18, of 1018 Eighth street northeast, arrested Tuesday for questioning in the shooting of Charles Howlin, 18-year-old electrical store clerk, was released last night when the shooting was termed accidental.

Howlin, who is in a serious condition in Casualty Hospital with a bullet wound in his abdomen, was accidentally shot by Weinecke as the boys examined a pistol in an electrical store at 1329 H street northeast Monday night.

Howlin first said he was shot by a mysterious assailant, later admitting he did not want to implicate Weinecke who fled after the shot.

Model Camp For Transient Aid Planned

District to Get $12,000 of Emergency Fund First Month.

Advances in Future Will Depend on Needs After Survey.

Concentration on District transients will be undertaken shortly by the local relief agency with funds supplied by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, it was announced yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator.

Hopkins said he would advance District relief officials $12,000 for the first month with later advances depending upon the needs.

Coordination of the emergency and transient relief agencies of the District will be worked out at a meeting of the executives of the two agencies in the District Building tomorrow.

Asked for $60,000.

Decision to establish a relief dispensary for transients was reached after an exchange of correspondence between Hopkins and District relief officials, who at first asked for a flat advance of $60,000.

Hopkins declared he was unable to understand how this figure could have been arrived at. "It is impossible for anybody to guess how much money is needed to care for transients," he said.

The plan to establish a transient camp in or near the District is part of a new program under which the Federal Emergency Relief Administration will aim at caring for transients throughout the country. Relief officials said that as many as 200 or 300 of these camps might be established.

Two Transient Classes.

In operation of concentration camps, authorities will attempt to differentiate between ordinary hoboes, who do not want work, and the thousands who are constantly on the move in search of employment.

Morris Lewis, director of transient activities for the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, will cooperate with District authorities in selecting a site for the local camp. Lewis views with favor the buildings owned by the United States Weather Bureau at Bluemont, Va., about 60 miles northwest of Washington. It is considered suitable for housing at least 200 persons.

Another camp site under consideration.

English-Bred Canandaigua Wins Laurel Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap

Irish Bullet Is Second In Field

Daniel Soot Takes Third Money; Porter Shows Riding Form.

Prize Package Defeats Juveniles in Opening Sprint Race.

THE Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap, a Laurel fixture since 1911, when Mrs. Black's Black Bridge won the race, was forced into the secondary position on the program yesterday due to the doings of Winooka and company. However, it was a beautiful race to watch, particularly to the eyes of Tommy Hitchcock, whose Canandaigua hopped, skipped and jumped, or whatever horses do in steeplechase races, to win from F. Ambrose Clark's Irish Bullet, Mrs. P. M. Gould's Daniel Soot and three others.

The English-bred Canandaigua was ridden by Alexander Scott, and the colored boy put up a Fifth Avenue job on the build-up. He rated the Hitchcock representative off the pace set by Irish Bullet and Azucar, moved up when the first named lost his rider and the second named lost his rider and then hustled his mount over the finish line. Canandaigua had a margin of a length and a half at the end, with Daniel Soot some five lengths farther away.

The race had its disappointments; in fact, its disappointments, as this matter involved the Gwladys Whitney entry of Biot and Rideway, which was never important in the running, although strong in the mutual play.

Strange as It Seems

For further proof address the author, enclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

A galloping golf game was played a few months ago in Columbus, Ohio, on the Wyandot Club course. Four players took turns knocking the same ball around the course at the amazing rate of 18 holes in less than 21 minutes—19 seconds less in fact, and all without a lost ball.

The players played so fast they had to use automobiles to keep up with the game. The system used was this: Player No. 1 started the game; Player No. 2, who was already down the fairway, rushed up to the ball when it stopped rolling, and sent it on to Player No. 3, who was farther down the line waiting for it. By the time Player No. 4 had taken his turn, Player No. 1 had caught up with the procession in an automobile, and was ready to carry the game on.

The players—all but one past or present State title holders—were Johnny Florio, past State amateur champion; Glen Bishop, past State champion; Mrs. Thornton Emmons, present women's State champion;

Prize Package, a first-time starter from the smart barn of Max Hirsch, was backed down to 4 to 1 in the closing odds, but gave his backers some anxious moments as Bright Phantom, another juvenile making her racing debut, barely missed the decision in the first by a head margin. Success came in the second race, a million-dollar ride, but as far as the win pay-off was concerned it wasn't worth 30 cents. Prize Package paid $11.00.

Glen Burnie gave the favorite players a rocking in the second race when he defeated the heavily played Grand Ace over the 11.6-mile course. Glen Burnie came through on the rail to wrest the lead from the pace-setting favorite and drew away at the finish. Wicklife was third.

Empire City flash, showed Maryland fans his skill in the fourth, bringing Red Badge through a bulky field of juveniles to win going away. Some good was second and Doekskin, a fast horse, was third.

"Cap" Stubbs Can't Gran'ma Have Any Fun By Edwin

Walt Mason, Himself

The Way Out.
I heard that Jinx, my neighbor, was in most unpleasant plight, for fruits of all his labor had been washed up in a night. Divers companies he trusted had blown up with quite a crash, everything in sight was busted, poor old Jinx had lost his cash. And I thought to find him weeping, sprinkling tears upon the floor, weary, dismal vigils keeping, sending up a raucous roar. But I found him calmly reading in his padded easy chair; if his stricken heart was bleeding, he showed little sign of care. "I'm an artist at forgetting," he remarked. "I do not yelp, for there is small use in fretting over things we cannot help. If depression is proceeding to my cot-

Police to Ask Drastic New Crime Laws

Cummings Gets Plan To day; Broad Federal Aid Provided.

Radical revisions of criminal law, and a system of universal fingerprinting will be recommended today to Attorney General Cummings by the emergency crime committee of the International Association of Chiefs of Police as the only effective means of suppressing crime and racketeering.

The recommendations are results of a study undertaken at the request of the Attorney General and are calculated to hasten speedy trials of criminals.

Judges of criminal court, the committee recommends, should be appointed for life. Permanent police heads are also asked their appointment.

No bail should be granted to criminals awaiting trial for a felony, the committee suggests.

During this period the criminal, at large, realizes he is almost certain to go to prison and this frees him from a restraint which would be otherwise imposed on him. He is, therefore, a most dangerous person to society.

The Attorney General will be urged to recommend that anyone who goes from one State to another after commission of a felony, or who transports stolen property across State lines, should be guilty of a Federal offense.
